Hope Deferred

The Prize Hazard

By Arthur Brisbane

"HOPE DEFERRED maketh the heart sick." That's in the Bible, and it is also in a decision handed down by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, telling Judge Clark of New Jersey that he was mistaken. The prohibition amendment was adopted legally. It stands, and is the law of the land. To which you may add that the amendment won't be repealed for many a day.

"Men fear death, as children fear to go in the dark, and as that natural fear in children is increased with tales, so is the other."

So Bacon said of our most widespread fear.

Marshal Joffre, who has the gratitude of his nation following him to the grave, quoted often the saying, "Vaut ne point ne dire heureux avant son dernier jour." "No man can call himself happy, until his last day."

"Death hath ten thousand doors for men to take their exit," and they all lead to peace, rest, freedom from the world's worries, responsibilities and anxieties. It is fortunate for the race that Divine Wisdom makes us cling to life. If we were all as wise as Bacon and as philosophical as the old Greeks, many would be missing.

Major-General Brown, chief of army engineers, says the United States government is virtually "at the mercy of the Alabama Power Co. in disposing of Muscle Shoals power."

That statement should interest somebody.

When they told Andrew Jackson something like that concerning a great bank, his reply was, that if there existed any such power he would crush it, "by the eternal," and he did.

Engineers report that the $171,547,000 St. Lawrence river power project, as now planned, will eliminate "about 75 per cent of the hazards incident to such construction."

The project, according to engineers, will develop 2,000,000 horse power.

Nothing could be more interesting or important, since power is everything in man's industrial work, equalling in importance fresh air, and water.

The public would like to know about one hazard, however, namely, the hazard of having the power, after the people build it, fall into private hands. Will there be a private company in the United States charging one price for the power, and a public-owned company in Canada charging for the same power exactly half the price charged in the United States? That is the situation at Niagara.

An encyclical to be issued by Pope Pius this week will reaffirm emphatically the Catholic doctrine on marriage, and is expected to express forceful disapprobation of birth control.

The Pope will stipulate in the case of marriages between Catholics and those of other religions, that the non-Catholic party to the marriage must guarantee that any children born will be brought up as Catholics, and that the right of the Catholic party to worship will not be interfered with.

Furtherfore it will be the duty of the Catholic party to the marriage to pray unceasingly for the conversion of the non-Catholic party.

The Catholic Church has one peculiarity useful in maintaining your position. It does not change its mind.

In Britain, 20,000 weavers have started the kind of strike that, in the long run, can never succeed. They are not striking against lower wages, on the contrary, better wages are offered them. They are striking against an arrangement that would enable each man, without overwork, to take care of eight looms instead of four, and earn more. They say that if one man takes care of eight looms, that will put other men out of work.

That's what stage coach drivers said when the locomotives came. Typesetters said it, when linotype machines were invented. There are more printers than ever, better paid, and railroads employ 1000 times as many as the stage coaches ever did.

When the spinning jenny, and other machinery came, it was necessary to build forts around mills, to protect them from angry workmen, who said men would lose their jobs. Immediately ten times as many were employed, since England proceeded to clothe millions in foreign lands.

But still workmen refuse to learn that greater production per man means greater wealth, wages, and comforts, in the long run, for everybody.

Record Tide Floods Winthrop Houses

GARRETT, NERVOUS, SEES JURY BOX FILLED UP

RECORD HIGH TIDE FLOODS 40 HOUSES

Whole Waterfront Is Swept; Long and T Wharves Under for First Time in History

Hundreds of persons were endangered, homes and cottages faced destruction, sections along the water front were submerged, ships at mooring rode level with catlogs, as the tide along the North Shore, lashed by one of the hardest gales in years, rose to a high mark of 13.86 today.

At Winthrop, the sea wall was in danger of collapsing before the onrush of mountain-like waves.

Eight persons, including two small children and three women, trapped in automobiles on the Metropolitan parkway, at Winthrop Crest, were at the mercy of the surf, for an hour, as the waves broke over their machines. They finally were assisted to safety.

40 FAMILIES CUT OFF

More than 40 dwellings, all occupied, in the four block area, between Sturgis and Nevada sts., on the Crest, were flooded as the occupants fled to upper rooms, helpless to escape.

Bungalows at Short Beach were inundanted in five feet of water, while at Point Shirley, the tide was within one foot of the shore dwellings.

Long wharf and T wharf, for the first time in history, submerged as the water made its way into ground floor establishments and in some instances into upper story quarters, occupied by artists and writers.

EAST BOSTON HARD HIT.

In East Boston, Marginal, Sumner, Lewis and Border sts. and the entire Jeffries Point section were under six inches of water.

Clark Dry Decision Hearing on Jan. 21

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—The appeal of the United States to test the recent decision of Judge Clark holding the prohibition amendment invalid was today advanced by the Supreme Court for hearing on Wednesday, January 21.

Chief Justice Hughes made this announcement today and said it would be heard ahead of all cases awaiting hearing on that date. Counsel upholding the Clark decision had requested the hearing be deferred until the middle of April.

New Hearing Denied in Steel Merger Plan

Youngstown, Ohio, Jan. 5 (AP)—Judge David G. Jenkins in Common Pleas Court denied an application for a new hearing in an injunction suit to prevent the merger of Bethlehem Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. The application and its denial made clear the legal path for an appeal on error, if the defending companies so decide.

Girl Fliers Set New Endurance Record

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 6 (INS)—Bobby Trout, Los Angeles aviatrix, and Edna May Cooper, Hollywood film actress and aviation enthusiast, established a new endurance flight record for women at 9:45 a. m. Pacific Coast time, today, when they had flown their airplane "Lady Ro|pb" for 43 hours 15 minutes.

Old Foes—Sullivan and Garrett— Meet Again in Court

A wildly shouting crowd of 500, two-thirds of them women, took City Hall by storm today, routed a police guard and invaded the Mayor's outer offices in protest against the proposed huge storage plant of the Standard Oil Co. in East Boston.

One woman fainted and others were endangered in the crush. The invaders halted all business in the old part of the hall and dispersed only after Mayor Curley ordered quiet and promised them fair treatment.

The storming of City Hall followed a march from Faneuil Hall, where a hearing on the oil company's petition for an oil farm permit had been broken up by their shouts and jeers, drowning out the voice of the petitioner's attorney.

Chairman Joseph Hurley of the street commission adjourned the hearing indefinitely. This, together with his ruling that speakers could not be cross-examined enraged the opponents of the storage project.

CARRY AMERICAN FLAGS.

Shouting and many of them waving small American flags, they swarmed into City Hall by all entrances and gathered in the first floor corridor.

Police on duty in the building ran to intercept them and stood on the stairs barring the way.

"Where's the mayor? We supported him, where is he now?" the crowd demanded.

MAX STRIPPED OF RING TITLE

New York, Jan. 6—Max Schmeling, crowned heavyweight champion of the world by the New York Boxing Commission last June as a result of his victory over Jack Sharkey on a foul, was stripped of his title by the commission today because of the refusal of his manager, Joe Jacobs, to accept Sharkey immediately as Schmeling's next opponent or a world's title bout here next summer.

At the same time the Commission announced it will consider a match between Jack Sharkey and an outstanding opponent, preferably Young Stribling, as for the heavyweight title.

The commission announced the indefinite suspension in New York of Schmeling, his manager, Joe Jacobs, together with William F. Carey, president of Madison Square Garden.

The disbarment of the German may pave the way for a match between Schmeling and Stribling in Chicago in June. A $500,000 offer already has been received by Schmeling for this match. "Pa" Stribling has indicated readiness to close.

GOODWIN SEEKS BIG TAX BOOST

A 20 per cent increase in taxes on incomes, corporations and other intangibles, collected by the State for distribution to cities and towns, is proposed in a bill filed today with the Legislature on petition of Chairman Frank A. Goodwin of the Boston Finance Commission.

The purpose is to provide temporary relief to the municipalities because of increased expenditures to relieve unemployment.

While the tax jump would be for one year only under the terms of the bill, Goodwin said that in justice to real estate owners, the arrangement could well be made permanent.

He quoted Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long as saying that more than $10,000,000 will be added to the cost of administrating affairs of cities and towns in 1931 over 1930 and that there will be a shrinkage of another $10,000,000 in the amount the State collects for distribution to the cities and towns.

Storm Hurls O'Neill Studio Into the Sea

Provincetown, Jan. 6 (AP)—The summer studio of Eugene O'Neill, playwright, its foundation battered by torrential rain and a wind-lashed surf, toppled into the sea today. The studio formerly was used as the Peaked Hill station of the coast guard and was bought from the government by O'Neill. It was situated on a cliff jutting out into the water.

12 PLANES FLY OCEAN; 1 DOWN

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 6 (AP)—A National Telegraph dispatch today said that one of Gen. Italo Balbo's fleet of transatlantic planes was forced down by motor trouble in the sea off San Pedro in the St. Paul's Rocks, and was taken in tow by an Italian cruiser stationed nearby.

St. Paul's Rocks is about 340 miles northeast of Fernando de Noronha, where 11 of the planes were sighted this afternoon, heading for Natal.

The planes had averaged just over 100 miles an hour in their flight since they hopped off from Bolama, Portuguese Guinea, at 9 o'clock last night, Eastern standard time. In the intervening 15 hours they had negotiated over 1600 miles of the "water flight" to Natal, the total distance of which is 1883 miles.

Bill Provides for Marine Compensation

Washington, Jan. 6 (INS)—Asserting that not less than 200 Marines have been killed since the United States intervened in Nicaragua, Rep. Cochran (D.), St. Louis, today introduced a bill providing World War veterans compensation benefits for disabled Marines and widows. Marines' widows now receive $12 a month. Under the Veterans' Act they would get $30. The bill would apply to any member of the military or naval service "while serving with forces since July 2, 1921."

FEEBLE SULLIVAN IS WAITING HIS TURN; COURT JAMMED

The Garrett trial is on.

The jury that will decide whether "Ollie" Garrett, as a Boston policeman, fattened his bank account by extortion in conspiracy with his wife and Miss Hatch, was completed after a two-hour battle at opening of the trial today.

Three sessions of jurors were called. The defense challenged 18 men, exhausting every challenge to which it was entitled. The prosecution challenged 17 men, one less than its quota. Eleven men were excused by the court.

Albert I. Fischel, a salesman living in Brighton, was appointed foreman by Judge Patrick M. Keating. The "12 good men and true" took their places in the box and the trial was underway.

SULLIVAN WAITS

Garrett, dapper and nervous, peered from the grilled prisoner's cage in the second session courtroom. Mrs. Garrett and Miss Hatch, fashionably garbed, sat in the front row of the witness seats.

Beyond the courtroom a hundred feet, in the office of Dist. Atty. Foley, waited the tall, gray-haired, aged and feeble man who is the government's star witness and the trio's accuser—John F. Sullivan, former proprietor of the Ritz Hotel.

"Sullivan of the Ritz," under constant police guard, awaited his hour to face Garrett in court and repeat, before the jury, the charges that Garrett took money from him to protect liquor traffic at the old Columbus ave. hostelry.

LATE IN STARTING

White-faced, straight-lipped, leaning heavily on a cane, Sullivan faltered his way through the courthouse to the district attorney's office, every effort of his frail body bent, it seemed, toward the ordeal that lay before him.

The trial was an hour late in starting. Garrett, who had been brought from Charles st. jail in handcuffs, was the last to enter the courtroom where, last June, his name was called in vain.

It was a dramatic entrance for Garrett's entrance to speak-easies and night clubs have so often been in the past.

"Garrett! Garrett!" his name was called.

prisoners' cage, which he entered and slammed shut behind him.

He nodded then to Herbert F. Callahan, his senior counsel. Then he turned, located his wife, and smiled at her.

He wore a freshly tailored brown suit. His face was fuller than six months ago; he has a new set of false teeth.

During the selection of the jury he leaned over the grill of the cage and whispered to Callahan many times and once, it appeared, he voiced violent objections to a prospective juror. Callahan challenged.

Mrs. Gafrett and Miss Hatch likewise discussed certain jurymen with Attorney Daniel J. Gallagher, associate defense counsel.

About 70 spectators fought their way into court. At least 500 others choked the first and second floor corridors of the courthouse, awaiting an opportunity to get in. Eighteen court officers and policemen kept them in line and foiled attempts to "crash the gate."

Before the jury was chosen Garrett's default, in effect since his flight last June, was removed by Judge Keating. This does not mean that he will be admitted to bail, although motion to that effect may follow.

Court said the jurors would not be confined during the progress of the trial. They will be heavily guarded at the request of Dist. Atty. Foley. Judge Keating warned them at length about talking of the case with anyone.

Immediately after the jury was completed Clerk Prendible began the reading of the 303 counts of seven indictments in which Garrett, his wife and Miss Hatch are charged with extortion, conspiracy and threatening.

Garrett Arrives at Court Puffing at His Cigarette

Garrett had arrived at the courthouse shortly before 9:30 o'clock, shackled to another prisoner in the van from Charles st. jail. Still handcuffed and puffing nervously on a cigarette, he was taken to the detention room. There the handcuffs were removed, he threw off his camel's hair coat and, lighting another cigarette from the butt of the first, began pacing up and down. This pacing he continued until he made his entrance to the court.

Mrs. Garrett and Miss Hatch arrived with Atty. Callahan. The arraider's blonde wife, looking thinner than when she sat in court last June waiting "Ollie" to appear, wore a blue crepe de chine dress, French nude stockings, black shoes, seal-skin jacket, mink trimmed, and a black velvet hat low over her forehead.

MISS HATCH IN BLACK

Miss Hatch wore a black broadcloth coat trimmed with black fox collar and cuffs.

Sullivan's entrance to the courthouse was through the Somerset st. entrance. He arrived with Inspector Mark Morrissey in a taxi from his Newbury st. home.

The inspector helped him from the cab and, leaning heavily on a stout cane, he faltered through the door and slowly up the stairs. His face was white and his lips were drawn in a thin line. He appeared to be more feeble than on his last public appearance. So great was effort of his frail body, as he hobbled up the stairs and down the corridor appeared to be bent on reaching the court.

COURT OPENS

He was taken to the district attorney's office, there to wait until his name is called and he goes into court to face the man he has accused.

Soon after came another witness, Harry Adams, the alleged Gilbert appearing prematurely gray book-keeper at the old Columbus ave. bankery when it was held up last May. Adams was expected to take the stand immediately after Sullivan.

Judge Keating, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Frank Pierce, entered the court room at exactly 9:30 and instructed Court Officer Harry Murphy to call the court for the defendants that court had opened.

None of the defendants was in the court when Officer Patrick Flaherty "hear-yea-ed" the opening. At that time only 15 spectators, who had been waiting more than an hour, had been admitted. There were about a score of newspapermen, including artists, seated at two tables.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle entered the courtroom at 9:37 with Henry Robbins the official stenographer. Atty. Callahan entered a few minutes later with Mrs. Garrett and Miss Hatch.

The two women started to take seats on a spectators' bench when a court officer motioned them to benches reserved for witnesses, in the first row immediately behind the bar enclosure.

LOOKS FOR "OLLIE"

Mrs. Garrett glanced about the courtroom, apparently looking for "Ollie." The two-man grilled enclosure was empty. Miss Hatch whispered something to her and she did not reply.

Doyle and Callahan conferred with Judge Keating for a few minutes and Callahan left the court, apparently to get in touch with Daniel J. Gallagher, his associate in the defense.

Callahan returned at 9:50 and Gallagher appeared about 5 minutes later.

At that time a total of 44 spectators had been admitted to the room. One half of the seats were still vacant, apparently reserved for the witnesses and such lawyers not connected with the case who wished to attend.

Big Crowd Outside Court Waits for Chance to Get In

Outside the crowd backed down the stairs to the municipal court and along the first floor court corridor, hoping against hope that there would be an opportunity to crash the gate. Twelve court officers and six policemen held them in check.

At 10 o'clock Judge Keating instructed the first session jurors, who had filed into the room, to return to the jury room. Garrett was not yet in court.

The room itself, even with the lights on, presented a gloomy appearance.

IN CONFERENCE

At 10:25 a general conference took place at the bench between Judge Keating, Atty. Callahan and Gallagher for the defense, Asst. Dist. Attys. Doyle and Gillen for the government; Joseph A. Sullivan, special legal advisor to the district attorney for the trial; Stenographer Robbins and Clerk William Prendible.

Following the conference, Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle arose and addressed Judge Keating, saying:

"May it please the court, Oliver B. Garrett is at present in default and it is within the province of the court to remove this default."

Looking at Atty. Callahan, the judge asked:

"Does the defendant, Garrett,

Jury Box Filled, But Soon Is Emptied by Challenges

Without further ceremony, the clerk then began to draw names of jurors from the barrel and the first 12 called were seated in the following order:

No. 1, Stanislaw Kozlowski, derrick operator, 28 Broadway, Chelsea; No. 2, Thomas H. Lanning, treasurer, 12 Hewins st., Boston; No. 3, Thomas F. Lynch, plumber, 284 Maverick st., East Boston; No. 4, James Ranazoito, foreman, 9 Hudson st., Boston; No. 5, Edward T. Croken, trainman, 283 E st., South Boston; No. 6, Charles E. Dwyer, machinist, 1 Bartlett st., Charlestown; No. 7, Dennis Hanlon, plasterer, 200 Hamilton st., Boston; No. 8, Ernest H. Smith, machinist, 127 Warren ave., Boston; No. 9, John J. Watters, tailor, 11 Iowa st.; No. 10, Patrick J. Harkins, janitor, 2 Lawrence ave.; No. 11, Thomas D. Sullaway, salesman, 24 Annabelle st.; No. 12, Rocco Costa, barber, 100 Kimball ave., Revere.

QUESTIONS ASKED

When the jurors had taken their seats Judge Keating rose and said it was his duty to put to them certain questions. He instructed that if the question affected a juror he was to stand.

Then he asked if any juror was related to any of the defendants or to the principal government witness, Sullivan. None arose.

The next question had to do with any juror being sensible of bias either way. Again nobody stood up.

Then Judge Keating asked if any juror had formed an opinion which would prevent him from returning a just verdict. By that he meant, he said, if a juror had formed such an opinion from reading some newspaper or newspapers.

In response to this question, Edward F. Lynch, the venireman from Maverick st., East Boston, rose and was called to the bench in conference.

Selection of the jury began with the box being emptied and filled again as challenges were made.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle challenged Frank B. Coleman, teller, 96 Mountfort st.; Thomas H. Canning, treasurer, 12 Hewins st.; John J. Carlson, salesman, 10 Malden st., Revere; Rocco Costa, barber, 110 Kimball ave., Revere; Stanislaw Kozlowski, derrick operator, 28 Broadway, Chelsea; James Romazotta, foreman, 8 No. Hudson st.; Charles E. Dwyer, machinist, 1 Bartlett st.

Those excused by the court were Harold L. English, 59 Oakview terr., a former policeman for three years and excused on those grounds at his own request; Edward F. Lynch, plumber, 284 Maverick st.; John Henning Young, both following a conference at the bench between counsel and Judge Keating.

MORE CHALLENGED

Atty. Gallagher, counsel for Mrs. Garrett and Miss Hatch, challenged Edward T. Croken, trainman, 283 E. st., and Ernest H. Smith, 127 Warren ave., for Miss Hatch, and Jeremiah Lyons, watchman, 19 Edson st., and John J. Watters, tailor, 11 Iowa st., for Mrs. Garrett.

The jury panel from the first session was exhausted in the first 40 minutes, then jurors from the third session were called. Before any of the new panel's names was called, Asst. Dist.-Atty. Doyle rose and said to the court:

"Do I understand that if the defendants see accept the jurors who remain in the box?"

TWO MORE DISMISSED

To this, defense counsel nodded in affirmation. Doyle then said that defense counsel step to the bench. After a short conference, Doyle then challenged two of the jurors—George T. Mooney, tool maker, of 840 South st., and Peter J. Donahue, porter, of 132 Bunker Hill st.

The names of Walter P. Billings, clerk, of 285 Dorchester st.; Willis E. Burbank, salesman, of 33 Hobson st.; Frank H. Cheney, inspector, of 273 Chestnut ave.; Charles D. Conkley, clerk, of 10 Bellmore ter.; Ralph Coppola, barber, of 72 Walworth st.; Joseph D. Donovan, operator, of 385 Chestnut ave., Chelsea; Albert I. Fishell, salesman, of 9 Egremont rd.; William R. Kehoe, contractor, of 90 Terrace st.; Walter J. Karle, mechanic, 134 Draper ave.; George F. Raub, instruments, 71 Reedsdale ave; Anthony Thomas, finisher, of 38 Colberg ave., were called to fill the places as quickly as they were made vacant, either by challenge of the Commonwealth or defendants, or by being excused by the court.

Two of this group, Ralph Coppola and Joseph P. Donovan, were excused by Judge Keating because they had formed an opinion, they said. Judge Keating questioned them at length before dismissing them.

Up to morning recess, the Government had exercised 11 challenges and the defendants had exercised nine of their allowed 18, while two men had been excused by Judge Keating.

Jury Is Finally Selected After 35 Men Are Challenged

The following who had formed opinions, were excused by the court: Frank L. Wheeler, manicure, 753 Ashford st.; Arnold Adelson, printer, 39 Carroll st., Chelsea; Michael Cooney, painter, 14 Mt. Vernon st.; George L. Hough, clerk, 83 Walk Hill st.; James Connelan, salesman, 15 Mt. Vernon st.; Hyman H. Jacobs, manager, 158 Columbia rd.

Gustave Woernle, manager, 91 Montclair ave., was challenged by the state; Clarence Snow, clerk, 11 Flint st., Revere, by State; Elmer Fuller, clerk, 54 Dale st., challenged by Atty. Gallagher, for Hatch; Charles W. Klnander, inspector, 11 Hillside ave., by Gallagher, for Hatch; Walter K. Kelly, mechanic, 134 Draper st., by Callahan for Garrett; Lewis Goldstein, clerk, 20 Thornton st., Revere, by the State; Joseph P. Donovan, operator, 385 Crescent ave., Chelsea, by State.

GARRETT ACTIVE

George F. Raub, instruments, 71 Reedsdale ave., Charles D. Cokley, clerk, 10 Belmore ter.; Frank H. Cheney, inspector, 273 Chestnut ave., by Gallagher for Mrs. Garrett.

JURORS WARNED

Garrett was in the small cage behind his counsel, and several times Callahan would lean back and Garrett would stoop over and on one occasion leaned over cage to consult on jurors.

After 35 challenges had been exercised and 11 men excused 12 men remained in the jury box to constitute the jury.

After selection of the foreman the jurors were sworn. Atty. Gallagher used a few minutes in conference with Miss Hatch and then Clerk William Prendible started the reading of the 303 complaints in the seven indictments. He had not finished when court was recessed at 1 p. m.

Before declaring the noon recess, Judge Keating addressed the jurors in a warning against talking of the case with anyone while it is being heard, even to routing their passage to and from the courthouse so as to avoid "those who might attempt to speak to you about it."

"Be very careful not to allow any person to speak to you and you in turn should speak to no one else concerning the case," he said.

"Where it has been found that some person has spoken to a juror, or a juror has spoken to someone else, it has been necessary for the court to take drastic action.

"In some instances the offending parties has been brought before the court and has been adjudged in contempt.

"At the time you will be instructed as to the law and evidence in this case. The court will instruct you and you will be fully informed.

"You will hear all such evidence as is presented by witnesses and the documents and necessary exhibits that will be introduced during the trial will be shown you.

"Let me again caution you. It is my advice for you not to read the newspapers while you are sitting on the case."

CROWD STORMS CITY HALL FOR OIL PROTEST

connected with the protest asked to be allowed up stairs and the police guard parted. With a wild shout the crowd followed, carrying the bluecoats up the stairs and engulfing them.

Those in the van rushed into the mayor's suite, and 200 followed, the remainder overflowing into the corridor. Behind them gathered city officials and employes from all parts of the building.

The men and women in the lead tried to get through the gate in the office rail and others tried to climb over but were halted by Secretaries John Shaughnessey, William Anderson and Louis Parramo.

Mayor Curley, who was receiving a Chinese prima donna and delegation of local Chinese business men, came out to meet the crowd and as he reached the gate a woman fainted. The mayor opened the gate and helped her to a chair. She recovered quickly.

"This isn't the proper thing to do. Everybody is entitled to his day in court and the petitioners are going to get it as well as yourselves," the mayor said. "You people of East Boston know how I stand in this matter, but I'm going to see fair play."

SHOUTS OF CROWD

"What are yougoin g to do about it?" someone demanded.

"I will not be cross-examined," the Mayor retorted.

The crowd began shouting, but the Mayor held up his hand.

"You're going to get your day in court, but you cannot stampede me," the Mayor finished and withdrew, amid cheering.

Former Rep. Thomas Niland, one of the leaders of the protest, then appealed to the crowd to go home and they left the building, dispersing after loitering in the School st. yard for a short time.

At Faneuil Hall, which was packed both on the floor and balcony, there was a 15-minute demonstration when Chanrman Hurley announced it was a rule of the street railway that "no fire flags" could not be questioned. The opponents wanted to cross-examine those favoring the big oil farm, which is planned to store 95,000,000 gallons.

ORDER IS RESTORED

Police circulated about the hall and immediately after the shouting broke out again when Dr. Joseph Santosuosso, representing the oil company, began to speak.

He read several circulars which had been distributed, urging attendance at the meeting, and one of those began with: "Fire! Fire! Fire."

The crowd took up the word and built it ringing over the market disorder from the historic building.

Chairman Hurley rapped for order and then called several times in the midst of the uproar. A few in the front row who heard him leaped to tables in front of the rostrum and, gesticulating wildly, demanded to have a date set, Hurley ignored them.

In the course of his remarks, amid the din that preceded the final outburst, Dr. Santosuosso said 400 men would be employed in constructing the proposed $5,000,000 plant and 400 others permanently employed with preference to East Boston citizens.

RECORD TIDE ON WATERFRONT IN STORM

Railroad between Orient Heights and Wardsworth st., East Boston, was almost at a standstill, as the trains ploughed through water high over rails.

Miss Katherine Crosby, of 24 T Wharf, an authoress, was rescued from her studio, when water reached a height of four feet.

The Megansett Tea Room, also on 2 Wharf, had to suspend business, as stoves in the kitchen were swamped.

Crews of ships and vessels moored at piers along the waterfront were forced to slacken the mooring lines as the craft threatened to keel under the strain and pressure of the rising tide.

Old-time fishermen compared the gale to the storm in 1898 when the Portland sank off Cape Ann with more than 200 passengers aboard.

The normal tide on the water front is 10.7.

Coast guard stations and lighthouse keepers along the coast from Maine to Cape Cod were warned to be on the lookout for ships in distress.

In South End, seepage of water from the heavy rains during the night caused an underground explosion, blowing four manhole covers into the air, narrowly missing pedestrians at Dover and Washington sts.

DARKNESS IN ROXBURY.

Considerable other damage was caused by the rain, and lights were out a large part of the time in Roxbury, caused by a short circuit in the underground lines.

On Marsh st., Dorchester, the sewage system, unable to carry away the water, backed up and flooded cellars in scores of homes. In several dwellings the water reached a depth of 3½ feet.

As rain lashed parts of Massachusetts, a cloak of snow stretched across northern New England.

Vermont was the hardest hit with a depth of 12 inches reported.

At Whitefield, Vt., for the first time in many years, woodsmen were forced to vacate their camps due to the heavy drifts.

is engaged in proving that a young woman can buy enough food to keep herself for $1 a day. Let's hope she can.

If it were impossible, what would become of the man that earns $4 a day or less, and must feed a wife and four or five children and pay rent, doctors' bills, buy clothes and shoes.

The main question today is, unfortunately how can a man feed himself and his wife and his children who hasn't got even $1 a day?

Garrett and Wife Exchange Smiles During Recess

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

And then came recess in the Garrett trial—a ten-minute rest period in the slow-moving legal spectacle.

An opportunity for husband and wife, defendants in the now famous case of the Commonwealth versus the Garretts, to smile at each other, whisper secret somethings, and establish that confidence that is expected to carry them through days and days of examination.

Florence Garrett smiled at "Ollie" when the recess was called. "Ollie" leaned forward in the prisoner's cage, smiled at his wife and then they exchanged confidences.

Miss Lillian Hatch, the other of the trio, sat motionless in her seat beside Mrs. Garrett, the two seated at the railing of the bar enclosure of the courtroom, beside the cage in which Garrett sat.

PLEASANT SMILE.

It was a pleasant smile, the kind any devoted wife would give her husband. A smile which assured faith and confidence. A smile which caused "Ollie" to beam. In a second the brief smile was over and "Ollie" briskly walked from the courtroom, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff John L. Donovan.

Dressed in black save the bright blue dress which Mrs. Garrett wore, the two women, sartorially, were conservative.

Intent and interested in the procedure, they leaned against the railing, quietly aware of all that moved about them—of the galaxy of men representing the state law and the Commonwealth and of the prying eyes of curious spectators.

Five other women, too, were in the courtroom, equally interested in the legal cinema; captivated by the process which impaneled "12 good men and true" and which establishes a court of justice for those to be tried.

MRS. GARRETT PALE.

Miss Hatch, friend and relative, was dressed in black coat, hat and shoes.

Frequently Mrs. Garrett turned her eyes to the cage, viewed her husband, immediately looked back in the corner of the enclosure, looked at her counsel, watched the proceedings, observed the faces of the jurors, listened to the challenges of the jurors by Daniel Gallagher and Herbert Callahan, but through it all maintained a stoical expression of confidence and assurance.

Harlan, Film Star, and Somerville Bride Part

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 6 (AP)—Kenneth K Harlan, motion picture actor, said today that he and his third wife the former Doris Hilda Booth of Somerville, Mass., had separated.

"There is absolutely nothing sensational about our parting," Harlan said. "We just could not get along. We separated on the best of terms, and I wish her all the luck in the world. We have not discussed the matter of a divorce, nor have we talked of reconciliation. The future will decide those things."

The couple was married last May, after Harlan had been divorced by his second wife, Mae Prevost, film actress. Harlan's first wife, Mrs. Florence C. Harlan, an actress, obtained her divorce in New York.

ALLEGIANCE OATH AMAZES LEADERS

Hiram Johnson Says U. S. Would Also Be Subjected if It Joined League Court

Washington, Jan. 6 (US)—The League of Nations was flayed yesterday by United States senators for setting up a super-government of which its League Court is the judicial department.

Revelations of the oath of allegiance which employes of the league are requested to take, astounded the senators. It requires officials to forswear their own countries and pledge allegiance above all else to the League of Nations.

Senator Hiram Johnson (R.), of California and foe of the League Court and other foreign entanglements declared:

"Has there ever been any doubt that the League of Nations is a super state?

"Of course, if our country ever became a member we would be subjected to the super-state in all matters to which we subscribed in the league.

"The oath only emphasizes what we have always insisted and what is impossible of denial."

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

The oath of allegiance and Article 1 of the regulations upon which it is based are as follows:

"I solemnly undertake to exercise, in conformity with article 1 of the regulations, in all loyalty, discretion and conscience, the functions which have been entrusted to me as an official of the secretariat of the League of Nations."

Article 1 mentioned in the oath says:

"The officials of the secretariat of the League of Nations are exclusively international officials and their duties are not national, but international. By accepting appointment, they pledge themselves to discharge their functions and to regulate their conduct with the interests of the League alone in view. They are not subject to the authority of the secretary-general, and are responsible to him in the exercise of their functions, as provided in these regulations. They may not seek or receive instructions from any government or other authority external to the secretariat of the League of Nations."

RECORD BY SHIPSTEAD

When shown despatches from Geneva regarding the oath of allegiance and the text of the oath as given above, Senator Henrik Shipstead (F-L), of Minnesota, said:

"This oath conclusively shows that the League of Nations is a super-government and not merely a representative of the various governments signatory to the league covenant.

"It is a separate and distinct super-government created by the Treaty of Versailles. It is a creation of the allied nations signatory to the Treaty of Versailles and other nations which signed articles of adhesion. These nations by so doing yielded jurisdiction over questions specifically assigned to the league."

Senator Nye (R) of North Dakota, said:

"The oath is not surprising in view of the contention repeatedly made that membership in the league of nations would cost the United States a serious measure of its independence as a nation."

RED CROSS TO FEED HUNGRY

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—The Red Cross has an emergency fund of $4,500,000 with which to administer relief to drouth sufferers throughout the winter.

This the Senate appropriations committee learned today from Chairman Payne of the organization. He said $849,963 already has been spent.

If its funds are exhausted, he said, the Red Cross will appeal to the American people.

He denied reports of a food riot at England, Ark., Saturday.

Meanwhile, House Republican leaders planned to send the $45,000,000 drouth loan bill to conference with the Senate in an effort to eliminate the Senate amendment which would add $15,000,000 for food loans.

WINE AND BEER BILL FOR R. I.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 6 (AP)—Amendment of the Sherwood law to provide light wines and beers for Rhode Island, and a memorial to Rhode Island Senators and Congressmen urging repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, are proposed in measures introduced by Republican leaders in House and Senate here today as the 1931 Assembly convened.

Both were foreseen in the inaugural address of Gov. Norman S. Case, who said the referendum of November was "so decisive there is no doubt as to the opinion of a large majority of our voters on this momentous question."

This was quickly followed by the measure introduced by Representative Ira G. Marcus, Republican floor leader, and by Senator Charles T. Toomey.

One would amend the so-called Sherwood enforcement law to manufacture and sale of beverages containing not more than 3½ per cent of alcohol by volume would be made legal.

Grover Whalen Declares That Advertising Is of Greatest Benefit to Wage-Earners

Advertising has made possible the enjoyment, by the ordinary working man, of comforts and luxuries that only the rich and high-placed once knew, it was asserted today by Grover Whalen at the Hotel Statler at a luncheon of the Advertising Club of Boston.

"CULTURAL CAPITAL OF U. S."

By Mayor Curley he was introduced as the present-day Benjamin Franklin, the mayor asserting:

"All that Benjamin Franklin was, Grover Whalen is."

In his address, Mr. Whalen said:

"No one of imagination can speak on the subject of advertising before the citizens of the cultural capital of America without calling to mind that Bostonians have been born advertisers from the day that John Winthrop's little company reached Charlestown 300 years ago.

"The people of the colony and the state have been singularly gifted in that blended art and science invented to keep good men and worth-while things from hiding their light under a bushel.

"While New York was plodding along under the Dutch and under the scarcely less conservative English, and While Philadelphia was pursuing her leisurely and tranquil existence under the Penn family, Boston and the Bostonians, restless, vigorous, adventurous, eager for wealth, were advertising over the face of the globe the promise of virtues of that new land called America.

"The fact that the first successful printing press was established in Boston in 1692, and the first newspaper, the Boston News Letter, in 1704, may have given a slight impulse to the inherent advertising genius of the old Colonials, but whatever the cause or impulse there is no denying that the trading system of Boston and her New England enterprise, sailed the seven seas, trading with Europe, the West Indies, Guiana Madagascar, the East Indies and China, and spread the fame and excellence of early manufactures and commerce into lands that were almost legendary.

"Boston has been a great advertiser of the spirit of liberty and freedom. She gave the famous tea party which advertised her determination to resist stupid oppression.

"What were Lexington and Bunker Hill save an advertised determination by the people to die rather than bend a knee to injustice?"

BENEFIT TO WORKERS

"Advertising, in this year of our Lord 1931 has placed the common man, the man of the people, the ordinary working man for a weekly salary or wage, upon a basis of comfort and luxury that only the rich and high-placed knew.

"Of all the achievements and triumphs of advertising, that is the most striking, the most dramatic—to make the poor man the peer of the prince—to put within the means of the hard worker and the humble the arts, the literature, the entertainment and the standard of living that were, within a few decades ago, reserved solely for the aristocrat and the plutocrat."

The luncheon festivities and Mr. Whalen's speech were broadcast through both stations WBZ and WNAC.

PRESENT AT LUNCHEON

Among those at the luncheon were: William Murphy, president of the Advertising Club of New York; William H. Rankin, president of Rankin Advertising Co. of New York; Mayor Curley, Louis D. Gibbs, president of the Advertising Club of Boston; Police Commissioner Hultman, Maj. P. F. O'Keefe of Boston, vice-president of the Advertising Federation of America; Ralph Hudson, general manager of Jordan Marsh Co.; John Shepard 3rd, president and general manager of Shepard's; Louis Kirstein, vice-president of Filene's; Felix Vorenberg, president and general manager of Filene's; Sidney Conrad, president and general manager of Conrad and president of the board of directors of retail trade board of Chamber of Commerce; Adolph Rich, president of Hovey's; A. Bacon, president of Chandler and scores of others.

Prior to the luncheon, Mr. Whalen called on Mayor Curley at City Hall and was presented with a key to the city, made of wood taken from an elm that stood during the battlefield at Lexington.

"You were giving these out at the time," said the mayor. "It will be rather unusual to receive one."

Transcontinental Rails

They Should Be Fostered by the Government

The following editorial is reprinted from the editorial page of the Boston Evening American of January 15, 1930. It was the third of a series of six dealing with the proposed consolidation of several railroads. It is reprinted because of its timeliness.

Why have we no real transcontinental railroads from coast to coast?

It is an obvious lack for which no remedy is offered in the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission suggesting railroad consolidations.

Our first "transcontinental" was built from Omaha to San Francisco. Every "transcontinental" today ends at the Missouri River—the Union Pacific; or at the Mississippi River—the Missouri Pacific and the Southern Pacific; or at Chicago—the Santa Fe, the Milwaukee, the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific. The nearest approach to a true transcontinental is the Southern Pacific, with its steamer lines from Galveston and New Orleans continuing its route to New York.

Every traveler from coast to coast over American railroads can testify to the inconvenience of our having no transcontinental line. Changes of cars and tedious waits characterize the required shift from one road to another at Chicago, St. Paul and Omaha. Through lines under single ownership would bring benefits to cross-country passengers and freight alike.

The history of American railroads is the story of hooking up short lines into long routes under one management. The present New York Central from New York to Chicago is compounded of over a dozen once independent lines. There used to be a change of gauge at Dunkirk, N. Y. Its inhabitants rioted in protest against any improvement that would let cars run straight through and deprive Dunkirk citizens of their profitable transfer business.

Why should the extension of New York Central stop at Chicago? Why not continue it to Seattle or San Francisco or Los Angeles?

Canada, north of us, with a population of eight millions, has two real transcontinentals: The Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National. The strength of the Canadian Pacific and its services to Canada are known to all. Indeed, it is the author of the world's most effective national transportation system, extended by railroad-owned steamship lines to all the great ports of Europe and Asia.

We have transcontinental communication by telephone and telegraph under single ownership. We shall soon have transcontinental highways. We need transcontinental railroads. Their formation should be authorized and encouraged by the government and its agent, the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Decision a Day Keeps Answer Away

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Eighteenth Amendment is back in Constitution again.

Judges Manton, Hand and Chase upheld the famous Eighteenth Postscript.

Bootleggers aren't discouraged. They're sending to Canada for new evidence.

They will re-open the case as fast as it's delivered.

Seems strange that judges are just starting to argue about this matter.

People had settled it long ago. All that prohibition did to drinking was to add romance to it.

Better dispose of this matter quickly. When you feed a stray cat more than twice it's yours.

Judge Clark's decision still stands. You can pick out the verdict you like best. Or you can take both. And run between them.

Trouble with our law is that judges didn't all study out of the same book.

THOUSANDS GO BACK TO WORK OVER NATION

By Associated Press

The return to work of many thousands of workers was noted today in dispatches coming from various sections of the country. Railway shops and automobile factories were chiefly affected.

In Chicago, Vice-President Frank Walters, of the Chicago and Northwestern, announced that 7000 men were returned to work yesterday along the entire system on a three-day-a-week basis, while from Detroit came reports that automobile plants in Michigan had re-engaged 22,000 employes. The Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Co. recalled 6000; the East Windsor Ford plant 5000; the Cadillac Co. 6000 and the Buick Co. at Flint 4500.

CAR WORKERS RECALLED

The men re-engaged by the Chicago and Northwestern are being used in the car and mechanical departments, closed since Dec. 24.

Between 600 and 800 shop men on the Moon Lines were returned to work on a temporary basis in Chicago and reports from other sections told of additional good news for railway shop workers. Thos. J. H. Dyer, vice-president in charge of operations of the Southern Pacific railroad, announced in San Francisco the return of 8500 employes from part time work to the full time payroll. Of these 7500 are in railway shops and 1000 on maintenance. Cities from Texas to Oregon are affected by the order.

After a period of curtailed operations, 750 men were returned to work yesterday at the Ford Motor Co. assembly in Denver.

FACTORY FORCES NORMAL

Boston Censor, John M. Casey, Urges 10-City Conference to Codify Stage Show Rules

Indorses Warning Given Theaters Recently by William Randolph Hearst

John M. Casey, during whose reign as ex-officio censor of Boston stagedom such plays as "Lulu Belle," "Desire Under the Elms," and "Strange Interlude," have had to pass up this city, says:

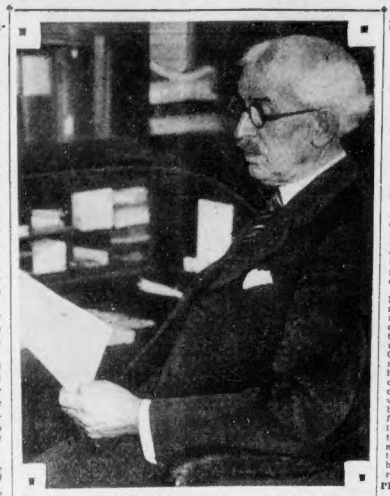
There would be no need of a censor if the stage cleaned its own dirty linen.

That event, however, he considers a forlorn hope, and in the following article offers a tentative plan for a general, uniform control—in his view a liberal one which would, for one thing, thwart those fanatics who would like to step in and rule.

He also seeks from his long experience to clarify the whole problem both for producers and public officials.

Doubtful that producers will make an organized effort to clean up, Commissioner Casey suggests a conference of the mayors of the 10 leading cities of the country to agree upon a uniform plan of regulation.

These 10 cities, he argues, would represent at least 40 weeks' booking each season, a weapon, he is confident, that would cause theatrical managers to ponder before producing ultra-risque shows.



BOSTON'S "CENSOR," John M. Casey, today introduces a plan for uniform stage supervision. He endorses the Boston system and says mayors of 10 big cities should confer and draw up a uniform code similar to it.

By JOHN M. CASEY

Chief of the Licensing Division of the City of Boston; Popularly Known Throughout the Country as the "Boston Censor."

Copyright, 1931, Boston Evening American

Mr. Hearst, in the Boston Evening American of December 16, 1930, says:

"Something must be done to clean up the stage. It is useless to depend on self-regulation. There must be some sort of government censorship."

He also says:

"The stage can either have a liberal censorship, largely of its own devising, or it can have an extreme and fanatical censorship of the kind that will surely result if stage conditions continue as at present without any co-operation on the part of stage people to correct them."

My opinion has been asked, and I have a suggestion to make which I believe might result in accomplishing the desired end.

REGULATION NEEDED

If the stage were properly regulated from within, there would be no need of a "censor," as Mr. Hearst indicates. But there is need of control just so long as there are producers who cater to this element in the community that is willing and eager to buy filth, obscenity and nudity.

The producers, taking them as a whole, have surely shown no indication of regulating themselves in such a way as to protect the public from indecent performances, and in so stating Mr. Hearst is putting it accurately.

If the stage can agree upon some form of regulation by governmental authority which would meet the conditions, well and good. Speaking for Boston alone, I believe our regulations, both in form and practice, are good. Florenz Ziegfeld and William A. Brady both prominent managers and producers of long standing, have said so.

MANAGERS AIDED

My thought is that if New York, the producing center of shows would do something in the way of effective regulation, we should not have the condition against which it is now necessary to take action.

Under the New York system at present, as I understand it, all licenses whether for amusements, taxicab, vendors or what not, are issued by a commissioner, and once the license is issued the interest of the commissioner ceases. It devolves upon the police of New York to see that the terms and conditions of the licenses are adhered to. Now police regulation in a large city like New York is apt to be uneven varying from precinct to precinct, even from one officer to another.

In Boston, the mayor has absolute control of the license from the time it is issued until it has run its specified time. The license is responsible to him for the type of character of the show. If he violates the terms of his license, action is taken.

BOSTON METHOD PRACTICAL

Such a method would, in my opinion, be of practical use in New York and would thereby benefit the entire country.

Again, why would it not be a good idea for the mayor of some large city, say New York, Boston or some other city, to call a conference of the mayors of the 10 largest cities to take up the question of theatrical entertainment? These executives could lay down certain perfectly understandable rules and regulations which the theaters in their cities would have to follow, and by the regulations the stage would know just where it stood and govern itself accordingly.

Just see what a weapon it could be, if the mayors of these 10 leading cities would take concerted action. These 10 cities would represent at least 40 weeks booking each year in the aggregate to the producer, and he could not afford to run counter to the adopted rules. Playwrights would be influenced to cut out the filth, obscenity and nudity, for otherwise their plays would not be booked. The stage would have the benefit of uniform regulation.

What the stage rules are in Boston I will state presently.

CENSORSHIP NOT NEW

Censorship is not new. It has been in existence in England since 1544, and the present law which has reference to censorship of the stage in that country was enacted as long ago as 1843.

There was no attempt at real censorship of the stage or motion pictures in Boston until the first term of Mayor Curley's administration. Because of the marked change in the character of the performances on the stage, a board was appointed under an act of the Legislature, comprising the mayor of Boston, the chief justice of the Municipal court and the police commissioner of Boston, which board has come to be known as a Board of Censorship.

Immediately after the appointment of the board, Mayor Curley called a meeting of many of the prominent citizens of the city and managers of the various theaters in Boston at his office. At that meeting, with the approval of all present, a code of morals to govern and control future plays to be produced in Boston was promulgated.

EIGHT RULES MADE

The rules, eight in number, prohibited, among other things, profanity, language that was obscene or lascivious in its meaning, the use of dope intended to show its effect upon a human being, the portrayal of a moral pervert of a sex degenerate, and the exhibition of nude or semi-nude females on the stage.

Every theater manager agreed to be governed by these rules, and the duty devolved upon me as chief of the Licensing Division to see that they were complied with. It is because of the character of this work that the misnomer, "censor," has been applied to me. But, as William A. Brady, the producer, said, ours is regulation and not censorship.

I attend the opening of every new play in Boston, and in accordance with the fixed rules agreed to by the theater managers, I make a written report of the show to the mayor when the occasion demands it. Where necessary certain eliminations or changes are requested.

Until recently, the managers have always complied with the requests of the mayor or his representative, but the failure to comply with the recommendations made a few week ago by a producer resulted in Mayor Curley's issuing an order to the managers of theaters that if, hereafter, the recommendations of his representative are not complied with, and if, after a review of the production by the board this noncompliance is found to be true, the license of the theater at which the production is playing will be immediately suspended, not only for the time the particular attraction is booked, but for an indefinite period.

PREVIEWED IN NEW YORK

Many times at much inconvenience, and always at the request of a manager of a theater or of the producer of the play, I have gone to New York to witness the production before the opening in Boston. In many cases eliminations and changes were suggested, and instances have occurred where the producer was advised to omit this city, and always because of the salaciousness of the show.

When there is censorship here it occurs only because of violations of the rules referred to, formulated and agreed to by everyone connected with theater management in Boston.

When there is no chance for me to exercise whimsical judgment over a show, if I had the will to do so, as I have not, I am disconnected with the theater for many years and believe I have a sympathetic understanding of the stage, whether considered from the viewpoint of art or business, by reading various theatrical periodicals and reviews, I try to keep as fully informed as possible as to the activities in the dramatic and moving picture field. I might add that a number of shows have not been produced in Boston because of advance warning to the producers or theater managers that unless certain changes were made they would not last after the opening performance.

French Endurance Fliers Forced Down

Marcelles, France, Jan. 6 (AP)—The French aviators Joseph Lebrix and Marcel Doret, today abandoned their effort to break the world's endurance and distance records over a closed circuit. They went up yesterday over Istres airdrome, coming down at 9:30 a.m. today. A 50-mile wind forced the two aviators down after 16 hours and 20 minutes.

Wilbur Opposes Oil Tariff Plan

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—Secretary Wilbur today announced himself against a tariff on oil. Such a tariff, as proposed from time to time by some of the leading producers, would be of little value to the small producer, the secretary asserted.

LOAN IN NORRIS SENATE FIGHT IS REPAID

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—The $4000 loan from which Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national committee, paid for literature circulated in opposition to re-election of Sen. Norris, independent Republican from Nebraska, has been paid in full.

Testimony to this effect was given before the Senate campaign funds committee today by Wade H. Cooper, president of the Commercial National Bank, at which the national committee maintained a $50,000 account, which secured the loan.

The committee resumed its inquiry into the uses made of this account, calling in its witness stand Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer of the national committee; James B. Reynolds, vice-president of the bank, and Ralph M. Johnson, bookkeeper of the Independent Publishing Co., where the anti-Norris literature was printed, in addition to Cooper and Lucas.

Cooper produced a ledger sheet with a notation signed "M. F. S." (assistant cashier), saying "hold $4000 for collateral for loan."

Senator Wagner (R.), New York, said it was plain the national committee was to pay the $4000 loan for Lucas.

"Lucas signed the authority to pledge the special account. He had full authority from Mr. Nutt to use that account," said Cooper.

Reynlods, the next witness, said he would be "willing to lend Mr. Lucas $4000 without any security."

Lucas, called next, said he made the loan, "simply as a personal one without any way obligating the national committee." He said he couldn't "conveniently get the money" in Louisville.

Bandit Trio Wound, Then Rob Farmer

Bridgewater, Jan. 6 — Three armed bandits, who are believed to have been on the premises all night, held up, robbed and bound George F. O'Connor and his farmhand, Michael Quinlan, in the O'Connor barn at West Bridgewater early today.

Before they tied up O'Connor and left him in the barn, suffering from a bullet wound in one shoulder, they forced him, at gunpoint, to return to the house, open an old safe and hand over two watches and a $10 gold piece.

Mrs. H. B.—
"Chipso suds win endurance test"

"In the 'community laundry' of our new apartment house, I was the first to try Chipso Granules. The other women exclaimed, 'Suds made as quickly as that won't last!' They did last, though, and were still there, thick and creamy as ever, when all my clothes were snowy clean. Now we all chip in for a case of Chipso Granules!"

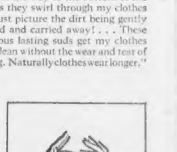
"The most time-saving soap on the market," says Mrs. F. E. P., of Lynn

Everyone is enthusiastic about these ready-made Chipso suds—the new Chipso Granules. They give you such quantities of snowy suds at the first touch of water! And they are suds that seem actually alive with concentrated cleaning power. They last and last and last—through two or three tubs of clothes or pile after pile of dishes. You never need a little "time out" either for making more suds or for hard rubbing. Clothes and hands are safe too . . . no fading of colors, no rough, sore hands, because Chipso suds are rich, not strong.

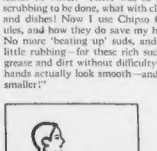
Mrs. A. B. W.—
"Clothes naturally wear longer"

"The thick creamy suds I get with Chipso Granules make water feel like velvet all the way to the bottom of the tub. As they swirl through my clothes I can just picture the dirt being gently loosened and carried away! . . . These marvelous lasting suds get my clothes really clean without the wear and tear of rubbing. Naturally clothes wear longer."

Mrs. N. N.—
"My hands look sizes smaller"



"It seemed to me I always had my hands in water. There was so much scrubbing to be done, what with clothes and dishes! Now I use Chipso Granules, and how they do save my hands. No more 'beating up' suds, and very little rubbing—for these rich suds cut grease and dirt without difficulty. My hands actually look smooth—and sizes smaller!"



Mrs. I. T.—
"Chipso came with my washing-machine"

"I've used it ever since," says this Roxbury housewife. "Once I tried a sample of another soap, but it didn't give me Chipso suds or Chipso results." Thousands of women rate the same. That's why Chipso (flakes and granules) is by far the most widely-used washing machine soap in the world.

Judge Bartlett's Stand on Divorce Law Praised

Editor Boston American:

In regard to the divorce law, Judge Bartlett has, I think, the right idea. If two persons cannot or will not agree to live together agreeably, it's an unhappy life for them for the remainder of their days.

There should be a law and a speedy law, that would give them their freedom. People who are fortunate to live in their homes happily and have not tasted of the bitter medicine that is out for others, should not be allowed to express their opinions for others who have had the experience.

The common man or woman should have a chance, as well as the millionaire whose money allows him his freedom by going to Reno and getting a divorce.

Figures Prove War Is Costly Business

Editor Boston American:

Let us apply a business judgment as well as principle to wars. Does war pay? It does not. The Civil War cost 15 billions of dollars, including pensions. The World War cost 116 billions, making a total of 131 billions of dollars. Did we get enough out of these wars to pay for the outlay of money and great sacrifices?

As a business proposition it does not pay. No one in business would spend so much money for so little obtained.

Use business principles in going to war. That is my plea.

Perjury Seen as Big Foe to Justice

Editor Boston American:

According to many judges in the United States, perjury is the greatest enemy to justice in modern courts. They mark its increase. Judge McCardie, before the Psychological Association in London, stated only recently that some drastic means must be taken to stop perjury.

There is no more difficult task than to discover the true and expose the false. If it could be stopped, the duration of many trials would be much shorter.

It would be wise to open this subject in yo r letter column to hear opinions on this matter from the public as a recent case is involved.

Practical Use Is Found for Pigeons

Editor Boston American:

For years I have fed them weekly near the Park st. subway station.

A Boston man interested in serums told me that after some years of study Capt. T. M. Doyle of the Veterinary Laboratory, British Ministry of Agriculture, had discovered this serum and was using it with good results.

He added that pigeons seem to be pleased that they were about to be used for some good purpose in saving or extending the after tenure of some old hen from this dreaful pox.

Sweet Potatoes Give "Murphies" Knockout

Editor Boston American:

Boston, in many sections, has grown fonder of sweet potatoes. The "spuds" or "Murphies" must now take a back seat in the gallery of the human appetite. This has all come out about on account of the high value of these sweets. They have a protein in them that is rich in nutrition.

I saw a statement from Dr. D. B. Jones, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, U. S. Department of Agriculture, backing this, hanging up in a market of Greater Boston.

How this old world is changing. Sweets can give a knockout blow to the Murphies that we have enjoyed so long.

Antiquated Anti-Trust Laws of U. S. Assailed

Editor Boston American:

If the present anti-trust laws are not antiquated, then the old-fashioned fire pumps may be considered modern. The Sherman Act was passed forty years ago, under conditions very different from those which now exist. Acts passed forty years ago may be harmful at the present time.

Take for instance the case of the Standard Oil Co. Conforming to the Sherman Act this splendid organization was split up, forming different independent companies. There is no question that these acts were in their origin aimed to be helpful to industry. But are they at present?

Consider the entrance of the Dutch-English Shell Company into the oil industry of the United States. This company is under one head, undivided, and can bring its full strength and force against our oil industry, which in accordance with our anti-trust laws is divided and cannot make a solid stand. The government cannot apply the anti-trust laws against any foreign organization.

What can be done about this? If the millions of gasoline and oil consumers would patronize our home companies, which give the best products and value at no extra cost, then our business would be better all around and a wrong righted as it should be.

This policy is good for any business.

Let's do so. Patronize home industry. FREDERICK HESS.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

Traffic officers in Boston are unusually considerate and thoughtful of pedestrians. The public owe so much to them that it needs to be reminded of their willing service in so many ways.

It is not my intention to pick out here and there some one of these officers that fills the bill better than another. This is what I want to avoid. In the busy corners of Boston they appear at their best because they seize an opportunity in such places and show their efficiency.

It is a difficult position to fill. Standing in storm, or even in summer sunshine, swinging hands to direct traffic is no soft position. The mind is often called into co-operation with the body, and with the multiplicity of their duties few, if any, mistakes are made.

They soon size up a situation and are masters of it. They deserve the good will of the public.

P. O. JOB SELLER TO BE TRIED

Washington, Jan. 6 (AP)—The Department of Justice prepared today to institute criminal action against the Indiana member of Congress charged by the Postoffice Department with accepting money from four postmasters to obtain their appointments.

Justice Department officials declined to name the representative.

The postmasterships concerned all were in the district of Indiana now represented by Harry E. Rowbottom, who was defeated for reelection in November.

The investigation was instigated by Indiana's two Republican senators, Watson and Robinson.

Mrs. Roetzel said she had paid $200 into Rowbottom's campaign fund, being informed there was a deficit. Wellbrenner said he contributed, but refused to say now much.

Career as Soldier Not for Young Pershing

Chicago, Jan. 6 (INS)—His father may have attained world-wide distinction as a soldier, but there will be no army life for Warren Pershing, son of the commander of all the American forces in France during the World War.

Young Pershing said so when he arrived in Chicago yesterday on his way back to Yale after a holiday vacation at Lincoln, Neb. When asked if he planned an army career, the young man replied:

"I'm a senior and I'm 21. I don't know what I will do when I get out of school, but I'm sure I won't go in the army. But I haven't chosen anything else. It's a problem."

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

IT WAS ALL a matter of rhyme and melody, this "June Moon," which last night fairly tipped a Wilbur audience out of its comfortable chairs. Just another tent in self composure, that audience surrendered early in the evening and by the end of the play was helpless. If, as Mr. Lardner and his twin author, Mr. Kaufman, insist, "June" and "Moon" were the song writers' delight, we must insist that when compounded for titular purposes into "June Moon," you promptly forgot the rhyme and rolled around in your seat.

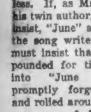
IT HAD BEEN reported from some authenticated quarter that the humors of "June Moon," which are distinctly of Broadway's music row would hardly reach the auditor of these cooler regions, to say nothing of snaring them completely with their subtleties. It was a slanderous charge, for no audience of any season that has had a bad weather to see a good play could have responded more royally to the deftly woven fabric. Lardner and Kaufman have erected around the song writer and his daily grind, "June Moon," which last night ruined many brave attempts at dignity in a public place, was chiefly a comedy of brand new characterization; a microscopic view of a great industry in full motion, with its operatives sweating on the job.



Nicholas Young

THE BETTER elements of dramatic success were present hard, such as the hero from one side and the final triumph of virtue on the other. Beneath these strict fundamentals were pleasures, the aches and pains and the selfishness and ambitions of the region known as Tin Pan Alley. There were people who were just downright simple; others deep in wisdom of life and a full knowledge of its advantages when taken in hand—splendid characterizations, from the top of the cast to its foot. The dialogue gave many evidences of the fine Lardner touch—the wise crack, with a dash of ancient philosophy. Yet the play was more than adequate on its own account, for it carried a pretty story, nicely told.

IF ACTORS were demanded for vari-colored roles, musicians, too, must be usefully employed. And so, Harry Rosenthal, once chief of Leo Prior's orchestra at the Brunswick, found himself not only a master at a piano keyboard but as good an actor as any in his company. This is Mr. Rosenthal's first stage experience; that may, in a measure, account for his natural conduct as the head tunester in a music publishing house. He was not of the stage; merely an amusing worker in the song business.

FLANKING Mr. Rosenthal's engaging performance, also discovered several others equally inviting. There was, for example, the rube song writer from Schenectady, for whom Mr. Lardner wrote some of his smartest lines. Thomas Gillen played the role in a fashion that was almost suspiciously natural; others of different mood, but not one of them misplaced, were Frank Otto, Elaine Temple, Edith Van Cleve, Ruth Abbott, Patricia Chapman, Ross Hertz and Fred Irving Lewis. Left for final tribute for a real job well done is John Daly Murphy. Here you met a window cleaner whose clients' business was in business, who was polished and polished in cadence that met every requirement of tempo, if not of harmony. Mr. Murphy was one of the genuine delights of "June Moon."

"JUNE MOON" is a comedy of rainbow chasing, a story of mediocre talent unadulterated and borne on by flaming ambition. Messrs Lardner and Kaufman have laid skilled hands on what the trade knows as artistic temperment and shaped it into a comedy that may be recommended without reservation. See it, and you'll retire with sore sides and a brighter outlook on life.

'LAFFIN' THRU' HOWARD HIT

At the Old Howard, "Laffin' Thru" fills the bill to the letter for mirth, pretty girls and comedy features. Al Golden of this organization is a favorite. Another big star is Betty DuVall, a soubrette with speed and pep. Bert Carr and Happy Hyatt were splendid. Other favorites include Alice Ryan, the Delmar Sisters, Brookie Woods, Abe Sherr, and Miles and Malcolm.

The two big scenes offer "Parisian Night Club" and "Broadway."

The house management also runs at the front with an extra stage bill that presented a number of old-time variety favorites, including Josephine Sabel, Annie Hart, Lizzie Wilson, Danny Simmons, Dave Genaro and Tom Harris, an 86-year-old youth who once danced before President Lincoln. Their act won tremendous applause and was easily one of the best acts that ever appeared at the Howard.

Kreutzberg and Georgi Here Next Saturday

A return appearance will be made by Harald Kreutzberg and Yvonne Georgi when the two celebrated German dancers give a recital in Symphony Hall, next Saturday evening, January 10, in the absence of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. New numbers, as well as past favorites, are announced for this occasion.

WERRENRATH IN RECITAL

Reinald Werrenrath will appear in Boston in a new role when he comes here for what he terms an "intimate recital" at Jordan Hall, the evening of January 15. The recital, it is explained, will be of an informal nature, Mr. Werrenrath interpolating explanatory comments on the songs which he sings. His program will consist entirely of German lieder by Schubert, Brahms and Hugo Wolf.

Although he has not given this type of recital in Boston before, it is not a new undertaking for the baritone.

Werrenrath's father was a baritone of as great distinction and made his first American appearance with Theodore Thomas. He was the first artist to give a series of song recitals in America, introducing this form of concert in 1877, in conjunction with the celebrated pianist, Carl Wolfsohn. His mother was a soprano of repute, who sang at Plymouth Church in Brooklyn when Henry Ward Beecher was pastor. For several generations back both his father's and mother's family produced a number of gifted musicians.

NEW FEATURE AT GAYETY

The girl show at the Gayety this week has fun, music, singing and dancing. In addition are provided three RKO vaudeville acts, which made a hit. The acts include Villa and Strigo and Bernice and Foran. The vaudeville is a new departure, and is in keeping with the announcement made by Manager Max Michaels that he would give burlesque and better shows this year than ever before in the history of the theater.

The chorus was seen to good advantage in "Atta Boy, Horace" and in "Baggage Master." Earl Root, Billy Lee, Lou Sell, Armond Monte, Dorothy Maye, Milton Bronson, Paul Jerome, Yvonne Medford and Teeta Sheaffer were stars.

Olympia and Uptown Change Tomorrow

An unexpected change of bill at the Washington St. Olympia and Uptown Theaters will bring "The Royal Family of Broadway" to their screens tomorrow. Ina Claire, Frederic March and Mary Brian are co-starred in this comedy hit. "The Blue Angel," starring Emil Jannings and Marlene Dietrich, will end at both theaters tonight.

WALLACE BEERY TO STAR IN 'THE BUGLE SOUND'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor for Universal Service
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 6—I knew sooner or later Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer would have to do something with "The Bugle Sound," Lon Chaney's picture. There was such sadness when Lon passed on that neither Irving Thalberg nor Louis B. Mayer could bear to even consider making the picture over which Chaney had labored so assiduously.

But business is business and a lot of money had been spent getting this story ready. They have selected Clarence Brown, one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's best directors, to direct the picture and Wallace Beery in the role that Lon Chaney was to have had. What an actor Beery is and what he can do with that part will make us forget our heartache over Lon Chaney.

WITH ALL PLANS made to put "Chances" into immediate production, Warner Brothers aren't going to let the work of Howard Hawks put them behind in schedule. True, Howard Hawks worked for weeks on the story and on the production plans, but now he has decided to take himself elsewhere, and as we say in the story books, the work must go on. Allen Dwan has signed a long term contract with First National, and his first will be this same story, "Chances," with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Waldemar Young is adapting the Arthur K. Gibbs story. This is important, because it is young Doug's first since the memorable "Dawn Patrol," which Hawks directed.

WHAT, OUR friend, George Bancroft, having stories bought for him? My goodness, we hear more things about George Bancroft than any actor in captivity. First Bancroft and Paramount have split, then Bancroft and Paramount have kissed and made up, then Bancroft is having disagreements with his neighbors at Santa Monica, then he is seen talking to some of them. Anyway, I am told that "Bill Morgan's Boy," an original by Charles Francis Coe, is being seriously considered for our friend. George Bancroft is on a vaudeville tour, where he is giving all the girls who like this type of hero a thrill.

"Solid South" Opens at Copley Friday

Holding to the policy of limiting its plays to two weeks, the Copley Theater will, on Friday night present Lawton Campbell's "Solid South." This drama of the post-war South will then be seen in Boston for the first time.

"Solid South" is satirical comedy of the Southern aristocracy and served as a starring medium early in this season for Broadway for Richard Bennett. Walter Abel will portray the chivalrous old Major Following. Vera Allen, his bereaved daughter-in-law, who has a way with the men, while Jessie Busley will play the part of the outspoken maiden sister.

"A Wonderful Night" at Shubert Jan. 15

The Messrs. Shubert present a lar operetta, "A Wonderful Night," will open at the Shubert Thursday night, January 15, instead of on the following Monday, as previously announced. The advance in the opening date was caused by the cancellation of another city en route where it was found impossible to get the huge revolving stage into the theater. This stage, which is laid upon the regular theater stage, will arrive here Sunday night.

INNFAVORITES AT SCOLLAY

The Scollay stage show this week has an unusual headline attraction, Allie Ross and his "Connie's Inn Entertainers." Manager Vinson brings this group of seventeen dusky entertainers from the very heart of Harlem's night life. They go over big, with their "hot" band numbers, an excellent "blues" singer, and two of the fastest dancers ever seen in the Hub.

The rest of the stage show has Kane and Burns, stage and screen stars, who stop the show with their hilarious skit, "Broadcasting"; Grace and Eddie Parks; the Scollayettes, in two superb numbers, aided by Frances Hart and George Gould; the Nathan Brothers, with Judy; the Irish tenor, Tom Fulmer, assisted by Mrs Wayne.

"Reducing" on State Program Next Friday

Marie Dressler and Polly Moran are to be seen at Loew's State beginning next Friday in their second Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer co-starring comedy, "Reducing." "Reducing" is said to duplicate the success of the comediennes in their earlier laugh riot, "Caught Short." The principal scenes are laid in a beauty parlor, which gives them all sorts of opportunities to get laughs out of the attempts of obese ladies to get thin and underweight ones to add a few pounds.

EX-CASHIER IN OPERA DEBUT THIS MONTH

EMMA REDELL, who makes her Boston debut with Chicago Civic Opera Company in the role of Elsa in Wagner's "Lohengrin" when the opera begins its Boston fortnight Jan. 26, is very proud of the fact that only a few years ago she was earning a livelihood by working as cashier in a phonograph shop on Broadway, New York city, while she took music lessons.

Miss Redell is an American by nationality, having been born in Baltimore, but her parentage was Russian. Her school days were spent in Washington where she worked as a stenographer until a teacher of New York offered to give her lessons free of charge. She went at once to New York where she studied day times and worked evenings. In 1922 she went to Vienna and for two years appeared in concert in Central Europe. Having been told that her career was in opera, she studied in Germany and was engaged at the Royal Opera in Altenburg, Saxony.

DR. GEORGE GOEHLER, conductor at Altenburg, was so pleased with her achievement that he revived Verdi's "La Forza del Destino" which had not been given in Germany for 30 years, and gave Miss Redell the role of Leonora.

Following her success in "La Forza del Destino" Miss Redell went on to the operas of Bamen, Elberfeld, Bremen and six other German cities, singing Wagnerian roles. She sang also in Italian parts, in fact, sang 22 roles in three years.

She joined the Chicago Civic Opera Co. and made her debut as Elizabeth in Wagner's "Tannhaeuser."

Joan Crawford Coming to Orpheum in "Paid"

Joan Crawford, revealing new emotional ability, will be on the screen at Loew's Orpheum Friday in "Paid." Headlining the vaudeville will be Phil Dennison's Original Diamonds. Also on the bill will be Buddy Doyle, late of "Whoopee" and "Show Girl"; James B. Donovan and Marie Lee; Three Small Brothers and Herbert, Geraldine and Victoria.

COUNTRY LIFE THEME FOR NAZIMOVA

It is one of the twists of fate, common in the life of the theater, that the celebrated Russian actress Alla Nazimova, should have achieved her high position as a stage and screen star without use of plays of Slav authorship.

Until Mme. Nazimova played in Chekhov for a season and then made her bow in the Theater Guild production of Turgenev's "A Month in the Country," which will be presented at the Tremont, as the third production of the third subscription season in Boston, for two weeks beginning Jan. 12, she had largely been regarded as the chief interpreter in this country of the Norwegian playwright, Ibsen.

IN TURGENEV'S play, she interprets a genteel Russian woman living on a landed estate during the regime of the czars in the last century. Hence there has been noted in her performance a strange note of authenticity, as might well be the case since her acting career had its triumphs in her native land for some years before she embarked on a tour of this country with the famous actor, Paul Orlenoff.

Dancer Is to Interpret 'Wine, Woman and Song'

One of the Strauss compositions, "Wine, Women and Song," is to be interpreted by Hans Wiener, famous Viennese artist, in the dance concert which he is to present in Jordan Hall tomorrow night. As the first solo number of his Boston debut, he has listed DeBussy's "Golliwog," the interpretation of which has resulted in his being acclaimed as the newest master of the dance.

LAST HONORS TO JOFFRE TOMORROW

Universal Service Special Cable

Paris, Jan. 6—A simple military cot his bier, Marshal Joseph Joffre, yesterday and last night received the homage of thousands of Frenchmen who reverently filed past the remains of the republic's World War "saviour," lying in the Chapel of St. Louis at the Ecole Militaire.

His face lined by his two weeks' battle against death which came Saturday, the Marshal lay clad in the long black tunic he wore at the first Battle of the Marne when his strategy hurled back a foe at the very gates of Paris.

"Papa" Joffre's last sleep is guarded by four officers of the Polytechnique School, to which, as a youth of 17, he went to prepare his military career.

Tomorrow at dawn the funeral procession, similar to that accorded Marshal Ferdinand Foch, will form outside the chapel and the body will be borne to the Cathedral of Notre Dame. Under the Arc de Triomphe it will halt for five minutes beside the grave of France's unknown soldier, above which perpetually burns a red flame.

Here a minute's silence will be observed. The funeral mass will be said at 9 a. m. and will be followed by a parade of soldiers and war veterans past Les Invalides, where are interred the bodies of other war heroes.

EDGE REPRESENTS U. S.

Ambassador Walter E. Edge will represent the United States at the funeral. It is probable he will march with other members of the diplomatic corps. Lord Tyrrell, the British ambassador will represent King George, and 30 of His Majesty's Guards and a military band are coming from London.

At Madame Joffre's request, the remains will be held but temporarily in Les Invalides. The marshal's widow hopes to have a tomb completed at Louveciennes, Joffre's country residence in southern France, in several months.

There, in accordance with her husband's wishes, she hopes to establish a patriotic shrine similar to Washington's Tomb and home at Mount Vernon. She will be entombed beside her famous husband.

U. S. Legionnaires Seek to Join Joffre Funeral

Paris, Jan. 6—Representatives of the American Legion in Paris today cabled the State Department at Washington appealing to the department to request French permission for Paris American Legionnaires to march in the Joffre funeral procession as official United States troops.

The French War Ministry had refused the Legionnaires' direct request.

TORIES OPPOSE INDIA'S PLEAS

London, Jan. 6 (AP)—England's Conservative Party, speaking through Sir Samuel Hoare, today raised its voice in protest against giving India responsible self-government.

Yesterday Lord Reading, speaking for the Liberal Party, outlined a responsible cabinet which would be the keystone of the Indian government. His recommendations were similar to those expected from Premier Ramsay MacDonald himself.

None of the conditions necessary to the existence of responsible self-government are to be found in India now, Sir Samuel Hoare said today.

The Indians returned to the attack and the next speaker began his talk with the assertion that continuation of the present government in India was impossible.

Deportation of Aliens Too Slow

Washington, Jan. 6 (INS)—It is estimated there are 400,000 aliens illegally in the United States, of which only about 100,000 are deportable. Secretary of Labor William N. Doak told the Senate today.

In the interest of America's unemployed it would take nearly six years to rid the country of the 100,000 aliens at the rate deportations are now being carried out. With increased force deportations might be boosted to 20,000 a year.

Baby Burns to Death, Mother, Girl Hurt

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 6 (AP)—Critically burned in a fire in which his mother and sister were also severely injured, Frank Frauls, 1 year old, died today at New Haven Hospital. Mrs. Filomena Frauls, 42, the mother, and Nancy, 4, were in a serious condition.

Retirement Granted Fall River Chief

Fall River, Jan. 6—The Board of Police Commissioners yesterday voted to grant a request received from Police Chief Martin Feeney asking for retirement.

The definite date of the retirement was not decided by the board. Chief Feeney was 70 years of age yesterday.

Veteran Legislator Dies

THE LAST MILE -:- By Lewis Allen Browne

CHAPTER 38

THE PLACE seemed to become tense—still—like Summer air in a coppery sky before a cloudburst.

The sound of Father O'Connor's reading the prayers down by the green door was something like the drone of insects on a hot August day.

Then Dick spoke up again. It was surprising how calm he seemed.

"Let me out, O'Flaherty, I want to say good bye to the boys."

"I wish I could, Walters, but I can't. It's against the rules. I'm awfully sorry. I wish I could."

"I know you do. Say—what—— monsters made all of these rules?"

"I hope whoever did gets in here," Mayor called.

"Wish I could come out and say good bye, boys, but I can't. That's all right, O'Flaherty, not your fault. You're one regular guy, just he same."

More silence. Dick became nervous.

"For God's sake talk, sing—spring some jokes to kill time until I have to go—unless I get a stay!"

"Sunset and evening star, And one clear call for me— And may there be no moaning at the bar When I put out to sea."

"Say—swell, Eddie — you ain't so nutty — that's good stuff — haven't heard that since I was a kid in school and I was too dumb then to know what it meant," Dick said, speaking rapidly.

"Hol-mes!"

"Jeez, don't say that," Dick pleated. "Hey, Eddie, there's more to that, can you say it?"

"Hol-mes!"

"DON'T!"

"Quiet, Werner, quiet now," O'Flaherty said.

The Last Mile

"I ain't taking it hard. I'm nervous, of course. I never had anything to do with electricity. Wonder how it feels? I hope it won't take long. They say Skippy Woodworth had all his insides turned red from burning, his brain, too. Is that right about keeping a guy's brains in a bottle. I wonder—"

Dick stopped speaking.

"Oh, my God—give me some coffee—give me——"

They could hear him gulp down the luke-warm coffee. And then three more guards, not regular death-house guards, came. Dick's celldoor was unlocked.

"All right, Walters—let's go," Callahan said. His voice broke a little. A guard fell in behind Dick, and one stepped each side of him, holding each elbow.

"Say, what's the rush——" Dick gulped a little as if short of breath. "I want to say good-bye to the boys."

"Good-bye, Sunny. I won't shake hands, it's bad luck. Hope you beat the chair."

"Sure." He moved down to eleven. Warner, thin, white-haired, almost ghastly in his gauntness with his great eyes, stared at him.

"Good-bye, Eddie. Don't know which of us is better off—

"Good-bye, son, farewell," Werner said. He hadn't spoken such sane words for weeks.

Kirby spoke first. "Good-bye, and stand right up to it, kid."

"Think I'm doing pretty well, well as you would."

"Better, probably."

"New style in pant legs, see, Mears?" he said, kicking his right leg so that the slit trouser leg flapped.

"Great stuff, you're a wonder —stick to it and good-bye, good-bye——"

Mayor tried to grin and be brave. "My trip next, see ya in a coupla weeks," he said.

"Sure, good-bye, Mayor—joke, me getting it first."

At D'Amoro's cell he said, "So long."

"Good-bye, glad I met ya, sorry you're goin' so soon." D'Amoro said. He turned away suddenly.

The guards closed in on Dick. They walked down to the green door. Father O'Connor's stepped beside Dick.

A guard unlocked the door. It stuck. He pounded.

The door opened.

They passed out, all but one guard who remained in the corridor.

The others shouted good-byes.

The door closed.

"Nerviest guy ever went through that door," Mears said.

There was a silence, a seemingly long silence.

Suddenly the lights dimmed.

When the lights dimmed the guard, who was Harris, a veteran keeper, glanced along the row of cell doors to make sure that by no chance any of them might be unfastened.

He knew what to expect, and dreaded it. It always happened.

Only the door to cell seven was open.

The six remaining men stood at their cell doors, staring. Even the demented Werner seemed to understand.

The lights brightened.

There was an audible sigh.

The lights dimmed again.

"God!" D'Amoro cried, in a broken treble.

His first day in the death house had chanced on an execution day and, hardened as he claimed to be, it nearly drove him crazy.

"Hol-mes!" wailed Werner.

And again the lights came up and again they dimmed.

Then bedlam broke loose.

Sunny Jackson soared like a caged lion. His deep bass voice seemed to make the great granite building vibrate. Tom D'Amoro was cursing in Italian; weird, staccato curses.

Sid Suffers

The men beat at the cell door bars, they howled and cursed and roared—at times their curses were shrieks and again they seemed to make noises like wild beasts.

Guard Harris sat in his chair by the end of the corridor, one hand on his automatic in its holster. He knew that it was humanly impossible for them to break through those steel-barred doors. He also knew that the seemingly impossible did happen at times. If those men got out they would tear him to bits.

For a long time these men howled and cursed and beat their iron stools against the bars with a hideous clanging, but gradually it died down and the men threw themselves on their cots—not to sleep, but to think, to wonder—and to feel sick to the very pits of their stomachs.

In the office the boys all pitied Sid Cavanaugh. They knew how he had worked to save his pal. He sat at his desk, his light overhead dim. He stared fixedly at the clock. When it was 11 poor Dick Walters would get the "juice."

The hands moved to 11. Sid's eyes turned to the telegraph room.

Eleven five—11:10—Sid's shoulders twitched. Polard, one of the operators, stepped out from the room and said to the night editor:

"Pronounced dead at 11:04."

Sid heard that but he did not hear the night editor's "Let it go!" which meant to get off the first execution edition. Sid picked up his hat and walked out of the big city room, a score of kindly sympathetic eyes following him.

He walked fast.

Finally he turned in at the street where Dick had lived. He walked past the house.

There was a light in one upper room—Dick's mother's room. She would be sitting up. Cielly would be with her. Sid had almost the same thoughts that came to Dick an shortly before the State had murdered him. He was thinking that poor Dick was through with his mile—he had made his last mile, not through a garden of lilies and olive trees, but through a Gethsemene of granite and cement and steel.

But Mrs. Walters, Dick's mother, and Cielly, whose mind had been given a sudden twist that had killed her love for him—they would be going through their miles of mental torture all of their lives — the memory of this "legal killing" would never fade.

Einstein Awaiting Proof That Time 'Vanishes'

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 6 (AP)—Twenty-five years ago Albert Einstein, in Berlin, concluded time was inconstant. The German professor said time varied with velocity.

Einstein now is here, confident time will confess to its inconstancy.

Dr. Roy J. Kennedy and Dr. Edward M. Thorndike, research fellows in physics are time's jailors in a laboratory cell at the California Institute of Technology. They have checked its behavior three years.

Einstein will be the first to learn the result of their work, for upon this experiment his theory of relativity may stand or fall.

Kennedy explains it:

"If we are living in an Einstein universe, time would change with increasing velocity, just as the dimensions of matter change, but instead of shortening time would lengthen.

"If a man were riding on one of the projected rockets to be soon at a velocity of 186,000 miles a second, his watch would shrink and, assuming it would still function, would lose 12 hours of time daily, which shows how intimately associated space and time really are.

"At the velocity of light, 186,300 miles per second, the watch would shrink to nothing and time would stand still.

"I wanted to find the most reliable watch in the world, one that would divide the ordinary second into a million-billion-billion intervals.

"The one finally selected consists entirely of mercury."

The earth on its orbit around the sun moves at a speed of 67,000 miles an hour. But it rotates also at the rate of 1000 miles an hour.

There is a difference in the earth's speed of 2000 miles an hour between midnight and noon.

The mercury watch experiment is to determine whether any time change is registered at the different velocities.

Savant Visions World End Through Change of Matter

London, Jan. 6 (AP)—A picture of the world ending through a slow change of matter into radiation was drawn for members of the Mathematical Association by Sir Arthur Eddington, professor of astronomy at Cambridge University, in a lecture last night. Based upon a supposition that matter slowly is being changed into radiation, he said the universe ultimately would become a ball of radiation.

The ball would ever grow larger, the radiation becoming thinner and passing into longer wave lengths. About every 1500 million years it would double its radius.

Among other points advanced by the professor was that all organizations must be swallowed up in advancing a state of complete disorganization.

They No Longer Are Frail Even If They Are the Gentle Sex

Milady Ties Mere Man on Water and Threatens on Land

Dr. Fralick's Prognostications Come True

Woman, fickle, coy and hard to please, also is getting hard to beat. She's still gentle—sometimes—but long since she ceased to be frail. Certainly you can't call a young Amazon frail who can swim like Helene Madison, play tennis like Helen Wills Moody, or wallop a golf ball like Glenna Collett. Since they ceased limiting their exercise to curtseying in the minuet and stepped wearing dresses down to their pretty tootsies, many of the sweet young things have become so athletic that they can take their brothers out and lick 'em on both land and sea. How many male amphibians can show their wake to Helen Madison? How many men tennis players can beat Helen Wills Moody? Glenna Collett will outdrive and output 90 per cent of the male golfers. How many Boston young men can outplay Sarah Palfrey or Marjorie Morrill on the tennis courts, outswim Albina Osipowich or outskate Mollie Thorne?

The Dianas of the present day haven't yet done much on the track and field. But the sweet young things only have taken up that branch of sport during the last decade. They're still young at it. Give 'em time. In events requiring strength or endurance they will never equal man, but in contests involving speed, spring, skill they eventually will be challenging masculine supremacy just as they now are in swimming, tennis, golf. One of these days along will come a winged footed goddess who will show her heels to the swiftest of man athletes, even as did Atalanta of old. Give the sweeties time and they will do almost anything.

George Underwood

Long ago in the days when the one-piece bathing suit was a rarity we stood at the waterside along with a famous New York doctor watching Annette Kellerman, just over from Australia, giving a swimming exhibition.

"Sometime not far distant women will be challenging all men's swimming marks," he declared the doctor. "In long distance swims particularly the fair sex soon will be competing with men on even terms."

"Has a woman enough stamina and endurance do beat men in long distance swims?" we queried and he answered:

"It is not a question of stamina and endurance. It is a question of ability to withstand low temperatures, to remain in cold water over long periods of time without becoming chilled, cramped or exhausted. Woman has better circulation than man. She should withstand the rigors of long ocean swims better. Eventually woman will challenge man's supremacy as long distance swimmers."

That, please remember, was in the days before Gertrude Ederle or the present flock of women long distance swimmers ever were heard of.

DR. FRALICK'S VIEWS

"Eventually, perhaps," went on the doctor, "woman may equal man in all swimming events, short as well as long. She is lighter boned and her body structure makes her lighter in the water. Her anatomy makes her a better water animal. Because of different pelvic bone construction a woman is stronger below the waist than man, stronger of hip and thigh. The forward progress of a swimmer is governed more by the legs than the arms. One of these days women swimmers will accomplish some startling feats."

Look over the times Helene Madison has made in the water at all distances from 100 meters to the mile and it will be seen how true the prognostications made more than 20 years ago by Dr. Wilfred G. Fralick, for it is the famous New York surgeon we have quoted.

During the holidays we visited the famous surgeon and over the coffee called his attention to the remarks he made two decades ago about women swimmers.

"Yes, woman is coming fast in water and different branches of athletics," he remarked. "It is a healthy sign. Rightly directed, open air exercise will mean better wives and mothers. The danger is in wrong direction and over-participation.

"Why in Germany last year they held a Marathon race for women. That was bad—very bad. And the Germans even attempted to popularize boxing among women. If Germany seeks to make better mothers for the sons of the next generation Germany better go about it in a different way.

"Those sports are too strenuous. What women want are non-strenuous sports which bring a girl out into the fresh air and sunshine, I prefer golf, skating and swimming for women to track and field sports. A young girl might find track and field sports beneficial, but only under the most expert and strict direction.

"Woman's entry into competitive sports is a healthy sign. It will make motherhood easier and make for better mothers. Exercise, fresh air and sunshine comprise the best medicine in the world."

RIGHT SUPERVISION

"Right supervision and direction of women's sports cannot be stressed too strongly. Participation in competitive sports under wrong direction or careless supervision often is more harmful than beneficial. Fathers and mothers should understand that before letting their daughters don athletic costumes and vie with their brothers in athletic endeavor."

We asked the doctor what he considered the best exercise for girls and young women. He replied:

"Swimming, golf, skating and tennis for girls and young women," he replied, "and golf, skating and swimming for women of middle age and even beyond.

"Much naturally depends on the woman. Girls should not engage in any competitive sport without consulting their doctor and undergoing a thorough physical examination. All sports should be rightly directed and supervised.

"As regards swimming, it is a most beneficial exercise for women But men and women should use discretion. They should be careful of the water they swim in. Many of the pools are unsanitary. Even beaches and open water near large cities have become contaminated in recent years. When the bathing season opens there always is a big increase in eye and ear troubles. With the use of a little common sense and discretion many of the ear and eye infections and troubles could be averted.

"We can't have too many indoor and outdoor swimming pools. But municipal and state authorities should be most careful to see that all pools and surroundings be kept clean and sanitary. All this comes under the head of right direction and supervision."

Toronto and Harvard met a week ago under Canadian rules and in this New York engagement the Crimson was returned a 4 to 1 winner. Tomorrow night the Canadians will be playing for the first time under rules which permit forward passing in the defense and middle zones.

By BILL GRIMES

Due to the setbacks they encountered over the week-end, the indications are that one of the wildest contests of the season will be played tonight when the Bruins and Blackhawks clash in the Boston Garden.

The Bruins and Hawks have been the pace-makers of the American division practically all season. The Windy City outfit got off to a flying start, but their wings have been clipped somewhat, and they are now trailing the Rossmen by two games.

Bill Grimes

For more than a fortnight the Bruins had been hitting on all six until they tackled the Montreal Maroons in the Forum last Saturday night. Copying the style of play used by the Bruins against Ottawa and the Rangers, the Maroons staged a third period offense, which netted four goals and the game.

Reports from the scene of the Bruin-Maroon battle state that the Rossmen attempted to play defensive hockey in order to protect their two goal lead during the final chapter.

If there is one branch of the game the Bruins have never mastered, it is defensive hockey. They have never met with success in that department. They are strictly an offensive team and any time they cease attacking, defeat is in the offing.

Officiating at Montreal Not at All Perfect

From an unbiased source, the information comes that the officiating in Montreal was not letter perfect. For instance, Nels Stewart interfered with Tiny Thompson time and again without penalty. On at least two occasions, Stewart held Thompson's stick on the ice with his skate but the infractions were allowed to pass unnoticed by the referees.

The Bruins do not cotton to defeat, especially one which is brought about after they have entered the final period with a two goal lead. They will be in a belligerent mood this evening, with the thoughts of the Forum fracas and the fact that they have not defeated the Blackhawks this season.

In their last appearance at the Garden the Blackhawks carried the play to the Bruins, coming up from start to finish. They were the wildest skating aggregation that has shown here. Although they did not appear to have any definite style of attack, the Hawks were going places for the full sixty minutes.

As the Blackhawks went down to defeat at the hands of Jack Adams' Detroit Falcons, before a crowd of 12,000 Chicago fans on Sunday night, they will not be in a better frame of mind than the Bruins tonight. They feel confident that they have the finger on the Boston men, and predict that the Boston lead will be reduced to one full game after this evening's tilt.

Charlie Berry Signs Red Sox Contract

Charles F. Berry, husky Red Sox catcher, signed his 1931 contract to play for the Fenway outfit. Berry, who lives in Philipsburg, N. J., forwarded his signed contract to President Bob Quinn today.

Berry is 28 years of age, stands six feet, weighs about 185, and has done the bulk of the backstop work with John Heving. His batting average was .288 for last year and he finished off with a .368 average at fielding.

Schmeling Turns Writer; Raps New York Commission

SAYS FARLEY IS FRIEND OF SHARKEY

Berlin, Jan. 6 (AP)—Max Schmeling, writing in the Berliner Zeitung, says he will defend his world heavyweight title in Chicago against any opponent picked by the national boxing commission, but that he will not defend it in a New York ring, where he won it.

Schmeling said he would not enter an American ring where the New York Athletic Commission had anything to say about the referee.

The German boxer had some harsh things to say about the New York commission and especially James J. Farley, its chairman.

"Only with bleeding heart and after many days deliberation could the commission headed by Mister Farley bring itself to recognize me as a winner of the title bout," Schmeling wrote, "while the National Boxing Commission, with 33 States behind it, recognized me the day after the fight.

"Mister Farley, good friend of Jack Sharkey, never could reconcile himself to a non-American holding title and naturally wants to set all wheels in motion to hoist his friend Sharkey onto the throne."

Schmeling also viewed the new no-foul rule of the New York commission with a jaundiced eye.

He said he was making his statement at this time to give German sport fans a clear view of the American pugilistic scene.

"Particularly since the next few days, perhaps, may bring the news that the New York commission has disowned my world championship title."

Ultimatum Will Expire Today

The New York Athletic Commission's ultimatum to Schmeling and his manager, Joe Jacobs, to sign for a title bout with Jack Sharkey expires today. Schmeling was recognized as champion after a bout with Sharkey in New York last June which ended with the German boxer on the floor, claiming a foul which was allowed, and the commission feels that the Boston sailorman should have another crack at the title.

The National Boxing Commission is taking a vote on whether to declare vacant the throne he now occupies. First returns indicated a widespread opinion that it should.

WET NEW YEAR FOR GOLDEN COAST MERMEN

TUMBLING INTO THE SURF. Here are five members of the Olympic Club of San Francisco going in for their first swim of 1931 on New Year's day. The five dove simultaneously from a springboard and are on their way down. Despite prohibition this quintet saw to it that New Year's was a wet one. But not in the same manner as most celebrants. (A. TWIN HOCKEY BILL AT ARENA

In the first amateur hockey doubleheader, M. I. T. will meet Northeastern and the newly organized Providence A. A. will clash with the University Club six at the Arena tomorrow night.

The University Club team, with such greats as Johnny Chase, Dinz Palmer, Ted Learned and Paul Curtis on the roster, has been bent from the start of this season on gaining the right to represent this country at the 1932 Olympic games.

Equipoise Favorite in Winter Book

New York, Jan. 6 (AP)—C. V. Whitney's Equipoise, leading money winning two-year-old of 1930, has been established as the winter book favorite for the Kentucky Derby at odds of 6 to 1.

The Derby will be run at Churchill Downs May 16.

Back of Equipoise ranked Mrs. Payne Whitney's Twenty Grand at 8 to 1; George D. Widener's Jamestown, 15-1, and the Tennessee stable's Vanderpool and C. C. Bostwick's Mate, 2 to 1.

K. O.'S FEATURE AMATEUR SHOW

Nine knockouts featured the Golden Glove tournament at the Boston Arena, in which the outstanding amateurs of the district took part. A crowd of 8000 spectators witnessed the 24 bouts.

Henry Surette of Leominster secured two knockouts to win his class. He stopped Henry Owens, his Cambridge rival, in two rounds, and finished Jimmy McLean of South Boston in the second round of the final.

Five of the knockouts in the tournament occurred in the semifinal round.

Joe Ricci, apparently in the lead after three rounds with Gene Morullo of Watertown in the fly-weight division, was sent into the fourth round only to lose, when an injury forced the bout to be halted.

The victories of Joe Delmont in the 147-pound class and Mickey Bishop in the 180-pound class failed to meet with the approval of the spectators.

The winners received a golden glove with a diamond in the center, while the runners up drew down silver gloves with a similar diamond. Signet rings went to those eliminated in the semifinal.

Hoop Tourney Is Scheduled for March

Chicago, Jan. 6 (AP)—Catholic High School basketball teams from all sections of the country will again march on Chicago for Loyola University's national championship tournament.

It was decided yesterday that the event inaugurated in 1924 would be renewed for the eighth time, March 15 to 22, despite disapproval of national tournaments by the National Federation of State High School Athletic Association and the North Central Conference of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Wear Is Opposed to Any Change in Davis Cup Rules

New York, Jan. 6 (AP)—In an interview with the New York Times, printed today, Joseph W. Wear of Philadelphia, who is retiring as chairman of the Davis Cup committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, declared himself opposed to any change in Davis Cup rules until the United States again shall become the defending cup holder.

Louis B. Dailey, retiring president of the U. S. L. T. A., recently advocated a new Davis Cup regulation by which players would be eligible for cup competition for not more than three or four years.

"I agree," Wear told the Times, "that certain changes should be made in the play for the Davis Cup. The only question in my mind was when to make the necessary reforms.

"I am firmly of the opinion that in fairness to France and the other nations we should do nothing until we have brought back the cup to the United States.

"We must be careful not to create the impression that we might at times be unable to use our best players and, therefore, were entering the competition under a handicap.

"The whole idea back of the Davis Cup is to establish a champion team.

"If it is decided that it is to the best interests of tennis and sport that the purpose of the matches be changed, that is well and good. But while another country holds the cup it ill becomes us to advocate this change or to attempt to make it binding on other nations."

Wear suggested that the 1931 Davis Cup team be picked from among George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago, Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex.; John Van Ryn of East Orange, N. J.; John Doeg of Santa Monica, national champion; Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J.; Sidney B. Wood, Jr., and Frank Shields of New York, and possibly Ellsworth Vines and Clifford Sutter.

Hank Bruder, Grid Star, Is Married

Waukegan, Jan. 6 (USI)—Court records revealed that "Hank" Bruder, star halfback and captain of the 1930 Northwestern football team, is married. His bride was Miss Omega Gilbert, 20, of Evanston.

FRENCH STARS TO RUN HERE

Boston will see two of the world's greatest half-milers when Seraphin Martin and Paul Keller of France, who are coming to this country at the invitation of the A. A. U., run in the Boston A. A. track meet on February 14.

The day before the 1928 American Olympic team landed at Antwerp for the world games, Martin flashed through 800 meters in the startling time of 1 minute 50 3-5 seconds, a full second faster than the present world's record, held by Dr. Otto Peltzer of Germany.

In the Olympic games 800-meter racing Martin took second and third in the first two heats, but later was beaten by Lloyd Hahn, B. A. A. star. At the time it was thought that Martin had gone stale in the Olympic games, his earlier races having taken the edge off his perfect condition.

Martin now is back in splendid racing form and will give the best of the American runners a battle over the half-mile or 1000-yard runs.

Martin and Keller, if they accept a program outlined for them by the A. A. U., will arrive in New York Feb. 5 and participate in the following meets: Feb. 7, Millrose A. A., New York; Feb. 10, Seton Hall, Newark, N. J.; Feb. 12, Meadowbrook A. C., Philadelphia; Feb. 14, Boston A. A.; Feb. 16, New York A. C., and Feb. 24, National A. A. U. championships, New York.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Fred Hoey, who is doing the publicity for the Boston Garden, has sent Mr. Boston a statement explaining why the 10-round bout between Jim Maloney and Johnny Risko will be staged on January 19.

"Maloney was willing to meet Risko on January 23, the original Garden boxing night," writes Fred, "but Risko insisted on January 16. Matchmaker Billy Ames was forced to compromise by naming January 19.

"Although it has been the policy of the Boston Garden to hold its bouts on Friday nights, in this particular case it was compelled to shift to Monday night in order to close the match."

"The conflict," said Mr. Boston, "was caused when the Boston Garden and Argonne A. A. decided to stage shows on the same night. The Argonne outfit is holding forth with Roberto Roberti and Jose Santa.

"I don't pretend to know anything about the delicate art of promoting boxing shows, but as a casual observer I believe it would be good policy for the Boston Garden and Argonne A. A. to arrange their cards so that they don't come on the same night. There are only two pro boxing clubs operating in Boston, while there are six nights each week upon which boxing is permitted.

"The Maloney-Risko bout is the stronger attraction and will probably end up with a profit, but there are many fans who would like to see the Roberto-Santa match as well as the collision between Shamus and Rubbery Jawn.

Callahan and Diamond in Salem Bout

"Bat Silva tells me he has signed Andy Callahan, New England lightweight champion, to meet Hy Diamond of the West End in a 10-round bout on next Monday night. The semifinal will feature Battling Ray of New Bedford against Jim Griffin of Cambridge. They tell me Ray weighs 28 pounds and that he will get a bout at less than the 126 clicks.

"Jack Murphy will open the Brockton Garden to boxing Friday night. He has signed Harry Allen of Brockton with Gus Brown of Canton for a 10-round jam. The Brockton Garden was built at a cost of $30,000 and gives the Shoe City the finest small boxing club in New England.

"Jere Gardner has started Jim Maloney training at Boston's Gym, Quincy, for his 10-round setto with Johnny Risko. Jack Carval, Marty Gallagher and Joe Barlow will help condition Shamus. Gallagher will appear in the semifinal against Gene Stanton of Cleveland.

"Met Alex MacLean, who relinquished his duties as matchmaker of the Boston Garden on Jan. 1. Alex says he can now watch the other fellow do some worrying. MacLean's last official act for the Garden was to close the Maloney-Risko mill. I look to see Alex active as a manager of boxers and maybe as matchmaker for a big outdoor show during the coming summer.

Hop to South Has Got Underway

"Joe Doherty crashed down to press row at the Golden Glove show to tell me he has his white flannels all packed for a trip to Miami.

"Tom Sullivan tells me that the Winter Garden, his miniature golf course on the Gallivan Boulevard, has gone over big. Tom at one time was treasurer of the old Fenway A. A., but says golf gives one fewer headaches than the boxing game.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

You may put it down as final that the only golf swing with which you can ever hope to get good results will be a smooth swing. If you ever play good golf, it will be when your swing is made smooth. Smoothness is not rhythm, but not necessarily gracefulness. Usually you become more graceful as a golfer as you develop smoothness of action, if only because of your better balance. Nevertheless are most awkward appearing golfers who are consistent with the ball because they swing smoothly. It is never too early, nor too late, to work working for smoothness, and no theory better reveals it than the theory of swinging with a device developed by yourself. This theory is so helpful because it at once starts you thinking on a different channel. You begin to think about swinging and think less about hitting. The hitting idea is widely disseminated in golf literature, is the thing that interrupts so many of you. But it hits awkwardly.

Don Fleet Sets New Record at B. C.

Donald Fleet set a new record for the single lap at the Boston College track, when he covered the 176 yards on the boards in the very fast time of 18 7-10 seconds.

The former record was set several years ago by Frankie Burns, B. A. A. star and was equalled only twice—once by Charlie Finn, and later by Fleet himself. Fleet eclipsed the old record by 1-10 second.

This was the third time this season that the Gloucester flash has set new marks at the Heights. He broke the old record for two laps on the boards, and on the cinders did a 49 4-5 for the quarter.

Student Direction for Penn Athletics

Philadelphia, Jan. 6—Thomas S. Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania, told the trustees of the university that management of competitive sports in future must become a matter of university administration and placed on a purely student basis.

BIG CHANGE IN HARVARD A.A. SYSTEM

With the coming of the House Plan to Harvard, undergraduates and alumni of Harvard may look for a change in the Crimson's athletic policy as well as the sky line across the Charles.

Such is the opinion of William J. Bingham, chief in command of Harvard's athletic affairs. In the course of two or three years, possibly sooner, Bingham looks for a general curbing of intercollegiate sports at Harvard in favor of intramural contests.

The present system under which Harvard plays a leading role in intercollegiate athletics is supported chiefly because the athletic endowment of Harvard College is comparatively slight.

Despite the fact that Harvard football teams contribute enough into the coffers of the H. A. A. to support all the other sports at Harvard, the yearly balance on the Athletic Association books is not very much. This is the chief drawback to holding intra-mural sports exclusively.

Second varsity teams and class teams will be the first to disappear under the new policy, should it develop as Bingham expects. In place of these teams, house teams will appear on Harvard's athletic program.

House Plan Will Cause Change in Athletics

The Harkness House Plan, operating at Harvard and Yale, will bring about a new environment in these institutions, and the athletic policy of the two ancient rivals will be affected accordingly.

Dunster and Lowell Houses, already in operation at Harvard have their House football teams and squash teams. When spring rolls around, these Houses will have their own crews, baseball, and lacrosse teams. The five other Houses, which will be completed by next September, will follow this example.

Charles Whiteside, coach of Harvard's varsity crew, expressed the opinion that in time, inter-house racing will eclipse intercollegiate racing. He does, however, add that the big event of the crew year, the Harvard-Yale race, is a permanent fixture, however, and the Crimson will continue to be the same traditional rival of the Blue.

Bass Keeps Junior Lightweight Title

Judge Churchill Expected to Retire This Week

Judge Joseph R. Churchill, who on Friday completes 60 years of continuous service on the municipal court bench in Dorchester, is expected to announce his retirement on that day.

Attaches and others familiar with the affairs of the Dorchester court said that they have heard nothing about the matter.

If Judge Churchill does retire, his will be the first judicial position which Joseph B. Ely, as governor of Massachusetts, will have to fill.

Judge Churchill, recognized as the dean of municipal court judges in the United States—perhaps in the world—has been on the point of retiring for several years.

For some time past Judge Churchill has been failing in health and strength. He has not been at the courthouse for several weeks, and his one hope, according to apparently reliable information, is that he may be able to go to his place of honor on Friday, there to make formal announcement of his intention to submit his resignation to the governor.

The municipal court of the Dorchester district has three special justices assisting Judge Churchill in the work. Judge Michael H. Sullivan has been associated with Judge Churchill for about 20 years.

Judge Jacob J. Kaplan was appointed a special justice there in April of 1923 by Governor Fuller, to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Judge William P. Merrill, and a few weeks ago Governor Allen appointed Mrs. Sadie Lipner Shulman, one of the first women to be named to the bench in Massachusetts.

Good Samaritan Hospital Gets Gift

A gift of $34,109, plus a conditional sum of $51,300 from the Commonwealth Fund of New York, to pay salaries over a five-year period for a research staff seeking prevention of rheumatic heart disease, is announced today by Alan Cunningham, president of the board of managers of the Good Samaritan Hospital.

Cunningham explained that according to the terms of the Commonwealth Fund gift, the hospital will receive $17,000 a year for the first two years after the proposed wing for the research department is erected and an adequate staff installed. Annual grants of the like amounts will be granted the third, fourth and fifth years, providing the work is satisfactory.

A total of $168,671, received from recent contributions was also made public by Thorvald Ross, treasurer.

Keener Duty Sense for Clubs

Mrs. George E. Gomley Sends Message to Members of Second District

By NANCY BREWSTER

To be fearless but tolerant; to have a keener sense of duty to the community as every-day citizens; to bring into civic life the harmony, peace and joy which come from service through the activities of the many women's clubs.

This is the New Year message sent to the 29 clubs of the second district of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs by the director, Mrs. George E. Gomley.

To the envious past of women's clubs, Mrs. Gomley pays warm tribute, but to the future of women's achievements does she look hopefully and confidently.

Her greetings continue:

PAST IS PRECIOUS

"As we stand upon the threshold of this New Year, we are looking ahead to 12 months of promise, of hope, of trust, and courage, days filled with wonderful opportunities. The past is precious, with its records of things attempted, some failures, but many achievements. Each failure is but a challenge to more earnest effort looking to finer results, as we learn our lessons from the past.

"From the past we have derived the beauty and the strength of work, and these we can take with us into the future with its new worlds to conquer, worlds brightened by our ideals and rich with responsibility.

"At this New Year we begin anew, but proud in our heritage, the ideals and goals of the pioneer clubwomen, and always recognizing our privilege in being selected to perpetuate them.

COUNT OUR BLESSINGS

"As we go forward into this New Year together, let us count our many blessings and share them with others. May we be fearless but tolerant. May we have a keener sense of our duty to our community as every-day citizens. May we bring into civic life the harmony, peace and joy which come from service through the activities of the many clubs.

"As we greet the New Year may we be broad-minded and tolerant from every angle the worth-while measures. May we have new strength for the needs of the hour. May we be a bit more friendly, with such a spirit of co-operation that others may take pleasure in working with us.

"Let us, above all, in our united effort, have right thinking, from which we may derive that inner consciousness which uplifts and stimulates all with whom we come in contact."

Sports Togs Are Now Worn All Day

By ANN ARDEN

MODEL from JAYS, INC.

UP IN the vast frozen spaces no daytime formalities are allowed. Those who brave the rigors of winter evidence a fine disdain for those timorous souls who suggest appearing in anything but hearty outdoor clothes under light of day. Wear if you must an evening gown by night—but keep to the tweeds by day!

AFTER HOURS of skijoring, tobogganing and skating, it is pleasant to come in for a warming drink and glowing fire. Tea hour at St. Moritz finds everyone at the bars or grotesquely clumping about to the seductive strains of jazz. Jackets are thrown off to show bright blouses and sweaters—coats are tossed off the mere spectators to reveal trim woolen frocks. That is the hour when everyone sits about in a satisfied glow, when no one worries about skirt lengths or feminine trends.

ANYONE WHO embarks on a real winter holiday without packing in a goodly supply of those dashing woolen sports frocks might as well turn about and go home. They are as important as the active sports costumes, they breach the gap between trousers and white satin. Tweeds, jerseys or other smart woolens are equally good if their stylings are simplicity personified.

THE COSTUME pictured consists of a Burgundy red and beige tweed knit wool jumper dress; it is sleeveless, the skirt has a clever flare, the belt is of the material, with matching buckle, the neckline is cut to a deep V. The frock is worn over a long-sleeved blouse in natural angora wool. Wrist-length coat, matching the frock, has two pockets each side front. The hat is of soleil-toned Burgundy draped to band and bow.

PROBABLY NOTHING gets the constant vote of approval like the knitted frock. Year in and year out it fills a niche in everyone's wardrobe—and especially so in that of the college girl's. She wears it until it is almost a rag, and the moment it is discarded another takes its place.

Hundreds of Conventions in Boston This Year

The coming summer will match the banner tercentenary year of 1930 for conventions in Boston, it was declared today by the Boston Chamber of Commerce after a survey of convention bookings thus far made.

To date there have been 21 national or international organizations and hundreds of New England organizations that have picked Boston as their 1931 convention city.

It is believed the advertising of Boston's Tercentenary throughout the nation and the world is responsible for the many 1931 assignments to the Hub.

PAMPHLETS SENT

Hundreds of brochures and pamphlets have been sent out to organizations throughout the country, in the promoting of Boston as an ideal convention city, and there have been many responses from organizations inquiring what benefits this city can offer visiting delegates.

The entire resources of the Convention Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce have been placed at the disposal of these organizations.

It is believed that before the first warm days of 1931 roll around there will be many more conventions booked here than there were in what, so far, has been the record year—that of 1930.

INTERNATIONAL GROUPS

Among the 21 national and international organizations which will hold conventions in the Hub this year are:

American Association of University Women, American Institute of Chemical Engineers, National Association of Credit Men, International Association of Display Men, National Sojourners, American Hotel Association, National Fraternal Society of the Deaf, Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, United National Association of Post Office Clerks of the United States, Army and Navy Legion of Valor of the U. S. A., International Typographical Union, American Society for Steel Treating and the Amalgamated Association Street & Electric Railway Employes of America.

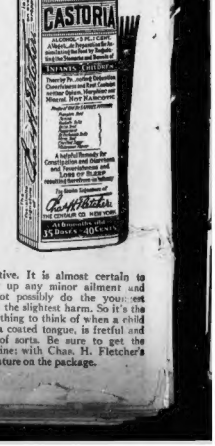
Castoria corrects CHILDREN'S ailments



WHAT a relief and satisfaction it is for mothers to know that there is always Castoria to depend on when babies get fretful and uncomfortable! Whether it's teething, colic or other little upset, Castoria always brings quick comfort; and, with relief from pain, restful sleep.

And when older, fast-growing children get out of sorts and out of condition, you have only to give a mere liberal dose of this pure vegetable preparation to right the disturbed condition quickly.

Because Castoria is made expressly for children, it has just the needed mildness of action. Yet you can always depend on it to be effective. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment and cannot possibly do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue, is fretful and out of sorts. Be sure to get the genuine; with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

BOSTON TOLD OF PLAN FOR POLAR TRIP

Famous Explorer Describes Equipment to Escape the Traps in Arctic Seas

How he expects to reach the North Pole in a submarine was told last night to more than 1000 persons at Temple Israel meeting house, Longwood ave. by Capt. Sir George Hubert Wilkins, hero of the Hearst Antarctic expedition

Sir George not only thrilled the audience by the account of his adventures in the Arctic and Antarctic by airplane and dog-sled but he had the gathering hanging on every word as he described his plans for a visit to the North Pole next summer in an undersea craft.

PLANNED MANY YEARS

"As far back as 1913, when I first met Stefansson, I decided that I would some day visit the North Pole in a submarine. At that time Stefansson said to me, 'If you want to do real scientific work in the Arctic you should use not an airplane but a submarine,' and as we talked I decided to some time do that very thing.

"On next Wednesday the submarine which is being fitted for next summer's visit to the North Pole will be moved from Philadelphia to Camden, N. J., where a sled deck will be installed as well as special ice drills that will be able to cut through 60 feet of ice in case we should come up under ice of that thickness.

"The submarine will be ready for sea in about one more month. In March we will go up the coast and make experiments off the Gulf of St. Lawrence, going under the ice and testing all our apparatus. We will leave New York about May 1 with a crew of 12 men and six others, including myself, to do scientific work.

3000 MILES UNDER ICE

"We will visit England, Germany and Norway and then will leave Spitzbergen July 1 for the under ice trip of 3000 miles, which will take us about two months. We expect to be in Alaska in September after visiting the North Pole.

"It will not be a hurried dash. We will stop eight hours daily for scientific work. We will take broadcasting apparatus with us and expect to be in daily touch with civilization via radio.

"Comdr. Sloan Danenhower, U. S. naval reserve, will be master of the submarine, use of which has been given to us by the United States government for a dollar a year, although it cost a million dollars.

"Hubert E. Swerdrup, who was with Amasen and Amundsen on their expeditions, will be chief of staff. Frank Critlen, who did such fine work in the S4 submarine disaster, will be our chief diver and Frank Shaw will be our chief engineer.

ICE 20 FEET THICK

"I find that most people are interested in the adventure of the expedition, regardless of the scientific side of it.

"There are no icebergs in the Arctic ocean and there are many places there where the ice is only two feet thick. I never saw it more than 20 feet thick there, but the ice cutting drills which are to be installed will be able to cut through anything we may encounter.

NEW ENGLAND BUSINESS RECOVERY BEGINNING, DECLARES HOOK

EXPECTS 1931 TO WITNESS BIG GAINS

Research and Aggressive Merchandising Cited as Most Important Factors

Business recovery is gradually beginning in New England, and improvement will continue through 1931, James W. Hook of New Haven, Ct., chairman of the industrial committee of the New England Council, declared today.

In a statement issued at Council headquarters, he emphasized that research, accurate market analysis and aggressive merchandising would contribute materially to business recovery.

Chairman Hook said:

VOLUME OF CONSUMPTION.

"In other lines it is evident a fair volume of goods, if measured by volume and not money value, is passing into consumption, and this is the more important fact.

"Much buying has been deferred. Consumers are doing without wherever possible and making old things serve longer. Savings accounts are increasing, proving that the 'work and save' philosophy is again coming into play. Those who are bogged down by installment purchase commitments are gradually paying their debts.

"All of these things portend a buying psychology in the making. How soon it will express itself in sufficient measure to turn the tide upward no one can say, but signs are not lacking that the turn is near.

RELATIVE VALUES

"This return to the 'work and save' philosophy throws that the buyer's sense of relative values has advanced under the pressure of the times, to the end, perhaps, that mer workers will be interested in the future in writing their own unemployment insurance and establishing their own old-age benefits by building up substantial savings accounts, and other reserves.

"Facing these conditions, manufacturers of consumer goods will feel the pressure to reduce costs further and improve their products, to the end that greater values and lower prices can be offered."

Tech Seniors Give 'Formal' on Friday

Earth Foundation Probe His Aim

DR. L. DON LEET, seismologist at Harvard University, is shown with the seismographs, with which he plans to undertake within a few months a series of tests to determine the thickness of the granite crusts on which continents are believed to rest. He also hopes to determine the formation of parts of the country before vast glaciers changed the contour of the earth's surface thousands of years ago. (Associated Press photo.)

Harvard Scientist to Probe Quake Secrets of Earth

By JOHN B. KNOX
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Research which some day may help science to reveal what kind of foundation the continents of the world rest on is now being planned by Dr. L. Don Leet, Harvard university seismologist.

Dr. Leet in charge of the Harvard seismograph station plans to begin next summer a program of producing and measuring artificial earthquake shocks. The shocks will be produced by dynamite. They will be measured by portable seismographs.

The research, Dr. Leet says, is the first of its kind ever attempted under the auspices of a university.

WORK IN TWO FORMS

The beginning of the experiment will take two forms. One will be the measurement of the speed with which vibrations travel through granite. The other will be the measuring of the thickness of drift left by glaciers 10,000 years ago revealing the original formation of the land.

Just why science should be interested in the velocity of vibrations through granite, Dr. Leet explains very simply.

Geologists have long believed that the continents were underlain by granite. They have been trying for many years to determine "how thick the layer is. The only means of study has been and still is the velocities with which quake waves travel through it.

TESTS AT QUINCY

Little knowledge to-day, now exists about the velocity of vibrations through granite. It could, however, be estimated. What it is based on, Dr. Leet explains, is the amount of shock from the quarry blasts made in the foundation work.

This first phase of his research will be undertaken at the granite quarries in Quincy, Mass. No only will measurement of the speed at the surface be attempted but, as far as practicable, the velocities of the vibrations traveling through granite under different degrees of pressure, according to its depth.

The second form the research will take will be a determination of the thickness of the vast coverings of rock and earth debris left by the ice sheets in the last great ice age. Beneath these deposits lie the solid rock formations that were at the surface before the ice advanced.

RECORD VIBRATIONS.

A charting of the old land surfaces would reveal a general picture of the land before it was changed by the glaciers, revealing, possibly that hills occurred in places now occupied by valleys and that rivers, 10,000 years ago, ran in different directions from those of today.

The principal means for studying these problems is a portable seismograph. The ordinary type includes a pendulum device on one end of which is a mass of lead. Waves in the interior of the earth cause the pendulum to move. The other end of the pendulum is connected with a stylus which records the movements of the lead. Waves in three directions are recorded.

NEW BROOKLINE MOVIE FIGHT

A fight over what kind of a motion picture will be presented in the proposed theater in Brookline opened today.

While the selectmen await complete plans for the theater from 14 applicants, the anti-theater group, headed by Albert F. Bigelow, announced they would demand the right to have a say in what kind of programs will be presented.

Representatives of several large picture companies have options on property at Coolidge Corner and a group of citizens, headed by Frank F. Stoddard, is asking why a theater should be built in that district when persons of another district started the movement for a theater in the town.

4 NEW ENGLAND GOLD HUNTERS IN RICH FIND

Boston, Melrose and Vermont Men Report New "Klondike" in Panama

Gold More than sufficient to assure four New England Yankees of huge fortunes.

Such was a report brought out today to civilization from the mountains in the interior of the Isthmus of Panama by Daniel W. Cameron of Melrose, Walton and Peter Tulloch of Jamaica Plain, and F. W. Brock of Montpelier, Vt.

With them into the City of Colon, Panama, they brought the richest samples of gold ore ever seen on the isthmus, it was reported in dispatches, and they declared that thus far they had found half an acre of the rich gold-bearing ore.

They went by steamer to Panama and, from there embarked on a chartered auxiliary sloop for a point on the east coast of the isthmus.

From that point they headed inland by canoe up a small river into the steaming jungle, and had been gone until today when they returned to Colon with word of another possible "Klondike."

Cameron led his men to the spot in the jungle where once he panned out four ounces of gold in three minutes. He was overcome with malaria on his stay in the jungle that time, however, and while making his way to hospital was robbed of everything except a pair of trousers.

Better Japanese Curios at Museum

3 MORE REVERE PAINTINGS

Presentation of three Revere paintings gives the Boston Museum of Fine Arts the most complete and distinguished collection of Revere works in the world.

The paintings, a very fine likeness of Paul Revere by John Singleton Copley, and portraits of Mr and Mrs. Paul Revere by Gilbert Stuart, although hanging in the Revere wing, are loaned only, not come into possession of the museum until yesterday.

The Chinese and Japanese departments are also complete with the purchase of a 14th Century lacquer box of Japanese origin, which fills a gap in the series of early and late lacquers. The latest additions to the classical department are three terra cotta heads from Tarentum and a large coin the gift of Rear Admiral Murdock. The coin is one of four known examples of the rare series of Lampascene gold staters which include some of the most beautiful examples of Greek coin art.

Other important additions to the collection include a Florentine engraving dated about 1450, a rare French clock of gilt bronze dated from about 1760, several early Chinese mirrors, and a monolithic railing from the Gunture dynasty.

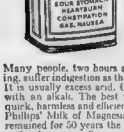
Too much ACID



Many people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief. Please do this—for your own sake—now.

Be sure to get the genuine, prescribed by doctors for conditions due to excess acid. It is always a liquid; it cannot be made in tablet form. Look for the name Phillips' and the word genuine in red.

The tree was conveyed from Mocha in Arabia to Holland about 1616 and carried to the West Indies in 1726. It was first cultivated at Surinam by the Dutch, 1718. Its use as a beverage is traced back to the Persians.

He's Too Bashful to Visit Her Home

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BEATRICE FAIRFAX will gladly answer questions regarding heart and home problems. Address her in care of the Boston American. Write on one side of the paper only. If you wish a personal answer enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope. Otherwise, questions of interest will be answered through her daily columns.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

You have given about everyone that writes to you advice, so will you try to advise me in my problem? I like a boy very much. He has asked me to sit with him in the theater and he speaks to me but he is very bashful. He has a brother that my girl-friend likes and we would like to ask them to come up to the house. What would you say to do? We would like to have them come very much. One of the boys, the one my girl-friend likes, is not afraid but is kind of backward about coming into the house. What shall we do? BILLY.

Beatrice Fairfax

Dear Billy: It is perfectly proper for you to ask the boys to come to your home to see you. That's what homes are for. If they seem too backward about accepting the invitation, I should be very wary of them. Young men who object to meeting parents are rather dangerous companions.

Tell Her Your Love

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a very young man. I have a girl in Cambridge whom I met two years ago. She likes me and I like her. She doesn't want to show it. Is there some way to let her know I like her? She is the only girl I've had for so long. She blamed me for something I've never dreamed of saying. She has not written to me for three months. I have written to her three times. Is it wise for me to continue going around with her?

T. COST.

Dear T. C: The only way of letting people know you like them is to say so, bravely and unafraid. But if she won't answer your letters or give you a chance to be friends, I'm afraid there is not much you can do about it. Some girls need lots of patient wooing. It makes their value greater, so they think. In the eyes of the young man, so if you really love her, lose no time in telling her so, early and often, and I wish you luck.

Doesn't Understand Herself

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Won't you please try to understand me, somehow? Other I can't understand myself. I am young, dress well and some people have said I'm pretty, but I'm never happy, never. I am always blue, lonesome, worrying. If I go anywhere it must be with mother and dad, never with boys and girls. I just stay at home and think all day and when I do meet people I get nervous. I don't care to be cheap. I couldn't be anything but a decent girl, but still I'd like to have a better time.

UNHAPPY.

Dear Unhappy:

You didn't tell me how old you are, my dear. If you're only 15, 16 or 17, you have time to wait a little before your mother and father let you go about with young people of your own age. But if you're 20, I think it's too bad that you aren't allowed to have a little more of life. But why waste your time in morbid repining? Why don't you take up something, some line of study or work? The world is full of delightful and interesting things and we forget our own unhappiness in occupation.

Some Hints About Etiquette

For the Socially Active Person

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. When you introduce a young lady to a gentleman and another gentleman comes later, is it proper for the girl to introduce the other gentleman or the one that met the girl first? The same if you introduce a boy?

2. If a young woman walks on a street with a man, is it proper for her to hold his arm? B. S.

1. Either one makes this introduction in either case. The point is, usually, that the more socially active person comes forward first with such an introduction. There isn't any regulation about which one does it.... Just come, makes the introduction.

And, by the way, the man is introduced to the woman, not the woman to the man.)

2. No, nor is this clinging-vine-attitude necessary.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

The other evening my girl and I went into an ice cream parlor and gave our order. After we gave the order my sister and my future brother-in-law came in and were seated at a table back of us. I think that it was up to my future brother-in-law to offer to pay for our check, but he didn't offer and my girl friend and I walked out. I was ashamed to face my friend after this incident, because in my opinion he was cheap. Please solve this problem for me. E. G.

Please don't mind if I frankly say I don't think that you have any real basis for your feeling about this, and I don't think that you have any right to regard your brother-in-law as "cheap." Why in the world should he pay your check? He had nothing to do with it, and he was quite right in not even suggesting that he pay your check. He did exactly right, the dignified thing and the thing that you should have taken for granted. Please revise your point of view on this, for it will mean you will see more clearly, too, on such occasions in the future. As a matter of fact, there is more "cheap" quality in your point of view than in your brother-in-law's.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

What's in Fashion?

Higher Necklines

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Jan. 6—A few days ago we wrote about one fashion item that's going—getting lower—heels. Today the slogan is "going up," and it's about necklines.

Fashionable daytime necklines are getting higher. And it's logical that they should.

Waistlines are getting higher. And a low neckline come too near meeting. The proportions of the bodies part of a dress aren't good that way.

Of course "getting higher" doesn't mean that high, stiff collars are coming back. It doesn't even mean that necklines are way up high around the throat.

It means that they are approaching the base of the throat—slowly but, nevertheless, surely.

More Femininity

As these necklines rise to present day occasions, they get softer looking. More feminine. More in harmony with all the other parts of fashion.

The two most-in-fashion neck lines today are the V-shape and the oval. You'll find this V-shape made with a collar on many of the tailored dresses and the bright pastels that you see under coats.

But it's just as much in fashion with collars—and many different kinds of collars.

The cowl draped neckline is the most important type of oval neckline. And it's one of the most becoming necklines of all. It was a Vionnet idea originally. Now it's everybody's idea.

Square Neckline

The square neckline—so long absent in the fashion picture—is beginning to come back. It's not worn as much as these other two, because it's not as becoming to as many people.

It isn't as good for the larger woman because it makes her look wider. Nor is it as good for the very thin-chested, because it apt to expose too many bones and hollows.

You're going to see more of the old "bateau," or boat-shaped neckline during the coming season. It's being worn as winter resorts in those simple little short sleeved dresses that are the mainstay of the southern wardrobe.

Usually it goes with the kimono cap sleeve, giving the broader shoulder effect that you find in so many fashionable dresses.

Scarf Neckline

The scarf neckline, in many many versions, gives an individual touch to a dress. It's a particularly good fashion to look for in a winter evening now. Because later, when you wear this dress without a coat, the scarf gives it a finished effect.

Jonathan Courtney Taylor's fine fashion for almost anybody's neckline. They go with feminimity. And they make a becoming spot of white or light color between the skin and the color of the dress.

One of the very smartest necklines—one that illustrates the higher neckline trend very clearly—is Dr. Yoke type that's going to be very fashionable on sports dresses. The newest idea in these is the crocheted yoke introduced by Schiaparelli, that closes with a draw string.

Every Wife a Lottery Today

By HELEN ROWLAND.

You never know how long a husband will last, how soon a wife will fade out of the picture; or whether a marriage will outlive the honeymoon or collapse before the train reaches Niagara Falls.

A husband used to be a Sure Thing. He was legally bound to love you, for life, and he usually did. If a man ceased to love his wife he seldom found it out. He was too busy buying perambulators, stoking the fires and paying off the mortgage, to take his own pulse or temperature. A wife no longer made his head go around:

Besides, in those days, a man married in order to get a Wife not in order to get a plaything, a playmate, a sweetheart or a mistress. He didn't expect the romantic thrills to last forever. And he didn't require the lady who was rocking the cradle with one hand and stirring the pancakes with the other, to send ecstatic ripples up and down his spine, lest her hair marcelled, paint her finger-nails red and dress like a French mannikin.

If a man brought home the bacon, paid the rent, kept his hair cut, and was kind and reliable, she didn't stop to wonder whether she had "missed anything" or not; or proceed to look around for a satin-haired parlor-sheik to feed her starving vanity. She didn't have time to psycho-analyze herself and discover that she was suffering from a complex or a fixation or a supposed desire for a new adventure or a purple passion, or an ermine coat or a trip to Paris.

Thirdly there were no unattached young women hanging around to REMIND a man that his wife didn't "understand" him or that he "looked too young to be married" or that he was "missing romance" and all that.

Just why a thirty modern girl should think that she was born to be a Pompadour, a Lorelei or a siren, instead of a wife and a housekeeper; and why every modern man should fancy he was born to be an eternal lady-breaker and woman conqueror, instead of a husband and a provider, is a mystery.

But that is why modern marriages are so flimsy and fragile, that they smash on a pebble, before they even reach the rocks. As long as people marry "just for a thrill," they will divorce for the same reason.

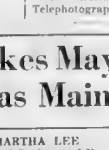
Cakes May Be Served as Main Dessert

By MARTHA LEE

Organizer and Conductor of New England's Largest Houseworkers' Club of Over 37,000

CAKE-MAKING is certainly a mighty versatile art these days, for not only may cakes be served as of, but they may be dressed up with such delicious sauces and fillings that they rightly take their place as a complete dessert.

Chocolate cake, for instance, can be cut in layers, spread generously with mocha filling between the layers and then split again and spread with whipped cream, both as filling and topping. If that is allowed to stand for an hour, it gets to deliciously yummy.



Martha Lee

One of our favorite chocolate cake recipes calls for ¼ cup butter, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 egg yolk, 1 cup flour, ¼ cup sour milk, ½ cup hot water, 1 egg white, ½ tsp. vanilla, ½ tsp baking powder, ¼ tsp. salt, ½ tsp. soda, ½ cup grated chocolate, melted.

Cream the butter and the sugar. Add the beaten egg yolk and ½ cup of the flour. Mix the milk and water and add this to the first mixture, alternately with the remainder of the flour sifted with the baking powder, salt and soda. Add the chocolate and the vanilla and beat thoroughly. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites.

Turn into greased loaf or layer tins and bake in a moderate oven, (350 deg. F.) for 20 to 25 minutes, for the layer cake; 40 to 45 minutes for the loaf cake. Marshmallows cut in half may be placed between the layers while the cake is warm and also arranged on top and covered with a hot fudge sauce. To make this, you will need 1½ cups of milk, 1 cup powdered sugar, 2 tbsp. butter, 1 tsp. vanilla, 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, ¼ tsp. salt. Cook the milk, chocolate and butter slowly, and stir until the chocolate is melted and the mixture is thick. Add the sugar and cook until it thickens again, stirring constantly. Then add vanilla and salt. Cool, beat and pour over marshmallows.

GOLD CAKE

For the Gold Cake, we'd suggest 3 tbsps. butter, ½ cup sugar, ¾ cup milk, 1¼ tsp baking powder, ¼ tsp. salt, ½ cup flour, 1 egg, ½ tsp. vanilla. Cream the butter and the sugar thoroughly. Add well beaten egg and cream again. Sift the flour, baking powder and salt and add alternately with the milk. Add vanilla and bake at 375 deg. Cut in squares and serve with Marshmallow Delight made with ½ cup cream, 2-3 cup finely sliced pineapple, 12 marshmallows, cut in bits, 4 Maraschino cherries, sliced thin, and 2 tbsps. of sliced nuts. Have everything ice cold. Whip the cream, fold in the marshmallows and fruit and garnish with the nuts.

For my Ice Cream Cake, Upside-Down Pineapple Surprise, and Special Cottage Pudding, perhaps you'd like to drop me a line and I'll gladly send you the recipes by return mail.

Faithfully yours,

CHICKEN SHORTCAKE

Make a rich shortcake dough as you would if making fruit shortcake, bake, split in halves and butter. Then put between the halves and on top, chicken a la king. Crust and chicken must be served piping hot. The canned chicken now on the market can be used very satisfactorily in the dish.—Mrs Katie Donovan, 55 Monroe St., Norwood, Mass.

SAUCE FOR SHELLFISH AND BOILED SEAFOOD

1 hard-cooked egg
1 finely-chopped sour pickle
1 tbsp. finely-chopped parsley
2 tbsps. salad oil
2 tsps. vinegar or lemon juice
½ tsp. dry mustard
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. sugar
¼ tsp. pepper
1 tsp. capers

Allow the egg to cool, after cooking it for 16 minutes. Mash yolk with fork and mix with mustard, salt, sugar, pepper and paprika. Then add vinegar, minced with white of egg, onion, parsley, Worcestershire sauce and last of all, the salad oil.

This sauce may be used for fried oysters or scallops also but as it is quite rich it is better on boiled fish.—Mrs. Annie O'Brien, 48 Alpine St., Roxbury, Mass., Suite 3

FOR MRS. M. McE. of Cedar rd., Salem, and Mrs. H. M. L. of 7 Trenton st., Charlestown

CARROT CAKE

1 1-2 cups sugar
1-2 cups cold water
1 cup scraped raisins
2 tbsps. butter or substitute
2 cups finely grated raw carrots (packed firmly)
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. nutmeg

Put the above ingredients in a saucepan and boil very slowly for about 5 minutes. Allow this to become perfectly cold before using. Then add:

2 cups walnut meats
2 cups flour (or enough to make a stiff dough)
1 pinch of salt.
1 tsp. soda

Bake very slowly in a loaf tin for about 1½ hours. Candied ginger, cherries or orange peel may be added if desired.

This is delicious and inexpensive as a fruit cake, just as good if steamed and served with pudding sauce.

I find that you must use your own judgment as to the flour because the carrots vary in size.

I do believe that all try this if you like fruit cake. I think it is the best cake recipe I ever used.

ALUMINUM PANS

FOR MRS C P J., of Dedham, Mass.

New aluminum pans should be tempered before using. To do this, rub them over with lard or in the oven. Heat slowly, then cool, without using. Repeat several times. Clean with a cake of steel wool wetted with soap. Heat the pan thoroughly before cooking meats, fish and scrape the meat and place in the pan without any grease. If the pan is sufficiently hot, the meat will not stick and is the way it is really pan broiled and not fried.

BROKEN RAINBOWS

By May Christy

"But this is France. What protection have we here? They'd say it wasn't any of their business."

"Like when that man followed me on the street in Paris," supplemented Wilda, "and I got scared and went up to a policeman myself, and the man was annoying me. The little gendarme only shrugged his shoulders, raised his eyebrows, put his hands and said that one's 'love affairs' were none of his business."

Her mother cried her—haltingly—of the sum that she had just paid Gigi for the return of the letters.

"What? You gave him all that money without even looking in the package?"

Had Gracie taken leave of her senses?

"Just as I was intending to count them," stammered Gracie, "some people came up from the beach into the Casino, passing right by us. Nothing on earth would induce me to give him another cent!"

"You're young. You've got all of life before you. You don't know what this may mean to me—"

"No. I was only a fool. A silly fool he flattered."

A blush grew slowly to the face of her mother. "Maybe when I found out how crazy I had been I found something else as well but, the way things are shaping now, it may be too late, Wilda . . . And Gracie said it only today. The kindest man I've ever known in all my life—and straight as an arrow."

"You mean he likes you, but—"

"I mean I wouldn't for worlds have him know what a blind idiot I've been . . . taking the dross for the gold . . . compromising myself with a—a gigolo . . . a rotter!"

"And now I've lost him——"

"Aren't you glad?"

Silence between them.

"If you refuse to pay him off, you think the beast will be revengeful and take those missing letters to Mr. Gordon?"

"I think he's capable of doing anything that came into his head if he wants to get even. Not that I ever injured him in any way . . . the boots on the other foot . . . and it's me he's trying to squeeze of money.

Maybe you don't know it, but when he and I were out togeths, it was always I who footed the bills . . . and so . . . and so . . . after my generosity this is all I get out of it!"

"Mother, since he's so kind and sympathetic, why don't you confide in Mr. Gordon?

"He wouldn't understand. He'd never think the same of me again. He has such old-fashioned ideas. There's only . . . only two kinds of women.

"Old-fashioned? So? The black and the white?"

"I never knew you liked him so. You certainly turned down a lot of his invitations."

"More fool I." We sort of made it up tonight. And then—then that has to happen . . .

"Mother, if you care for him, why don't you trust him more?

Sensitive Tests for Asthma

Disease Cured by Removing Irritant

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

NO ONE who has never had it can really appreciate the misery and anguish that one with asthma goes through in an attack of this dreaded disease, there is a spasm of the windpipe and of the smaller tubes that bring air to the lungs. There is marked difficulty in breathing The patient can not lie down and he may assume odd positions in his attempts to breathe more freely. He complains that he is unable to "catch his breath." He suffers painfully because of the lack of air reaching his lungs.

Dr. Copeland

We have a great group of cases caused by sensitiveness to certain substances. These may be animal emanations, certain foods, the pollen of plants, and in some cases, substances developed by bacteria in many instances. The bedding or one of the house furnishings may be the source of the irritation.

Individuals suffering from this type of asthma should be subjected to "sensitivity tests." By means of these tests the substance which causes the attacks may be determined. Then when it is removed from the diet, the clothing or the surroundings the attacks usually disappear. The tests are simple and painless and the results are gratifying. The results of the treatment have been exceptionally successful in children.

A change in climate is likely to benefit persons suffering from asthma. Countries with dry, temperate climate are helpful to many.

The victim of chronic asthma should be under the constant supervision of a physician. Continued asthmatic attacks weaken the heart and lungs. These organs should be periodically examined for any signs of weakness so that proper treatment may be given.

Answers to Health Queries

M F H Q—What causes black spots to appear before the eyes?

A.—This may be due to biliousness. Correct your diet and avoid poor elimination.

M. R. Q. What will increase the growth of the eyelashes?

A—Application of 1 per cent oxide of mercury ointment, applied at night upon retiring should be helpful, but the treatment may have to be continued over a long time before the desired results are obtained.

M. G. C. Q What are some of the nerve building foods?

A—It is harmful to smoke two cigarettes daily if one is more or less nervous otherwise?

A—Part of a well-balanced diet and the nervous system will be properly nourished and taken care of. Eat more fruit and vegetables, avoiding too much meat, as well as excessive tea and coffee

1930 Dividend Records Are Compared

Considering All Things Last Year's Disbursements Showed Fair Average

By B. C. Forbes

New York Jan 6 The 1930 dividend record is less unfavorable than might have been expected, all things considered.

Of course, the showing compares very poorly with the banner year of 1929, but here were fully as many increases in dividends as there were in 1928.

December brought no fewer than 132 extra dividend payments, although a year ago the total was 216. Only 25 corporations started dividends last month against 53 a year ago. There were only 20 stock dividends declared in December or less than half the total of a year ago. Also, only 14 corporations increased their rates in contrast with 51 in the final month of 1929.

B. C. Forbes

DECEMBER, 1930	Ind.	P.U.	R.R.

1930	Ind.	P.U.	R.R.
Extra	650	60	28
Initial	74	16	9
Stock	107	4	3
Increased	129	23	7

Totals	1,492	2,383	1,408	1,176	1,020

It is when we turn to chances in the downward direction for 1930 makes a very bad exhibit As a matter of fact, this column has received numerous complaints that companies perfectly able to maintain their full dividend rates did not do so, but were carried away by unreasonable fears.

The question has been frequently raised, "What is a surplus for?" My conception of a surplus always has been that it is a reserve, accumulated to take care of whatever unusual needs may arise. My sympathies therefore, have been largely with stockholders who have contended that directors should not hesitate to draw upon surpluses in an emergency in order to maintain dividend disbursements, at least for a reasonable period. There have actually been instances of companies that earned more than their full dividends, but yet reduced the amount distributed.

It is to be hoped that during 1931 a more rational view will be taken of surpluses and their proper disposition. Obviously, it is all wrong to add unnecessarily to pessimism by cutting the income of investors except where any other course would be distinctly dangerous. Happily, there is subsiding.

This table brings out vividly how many made last year as compared with other years:

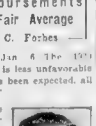
STAFF TO AID BUSINESS IS ENLARGED

By FRANK H. SIMONDS

Hugh Butler, New England manager of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, offers improvement of already good service for our business and financial leaders as his New Year's contribution to the cause of restoring prosperity. Butler's domestic commerce news is to be issued bi-monthly.



Hugh Butler

"Cort has had an admirable background for his work, first in Worcester and Manchester and later when he was engaged in the work of making market studies for The Farm Journal, New York, and with the McGraw-Hill Insurance Company's Policyholders Service Bureau, in the marketing and distribution section. With the Farm Journal Advertising Department his research work was for the purpose of developing advertising accounts for that paper, while with the McGraw-Hill people he was providing consulting (marketing) service for business men."

F. J. Lisman, writing about the railroads, suggests the highways could not accommodate the traffic handled by the steam carriers. Mr. Lisman says most of the highways are already very crowded. If that is the case, automotive competition can be expected to afford its own curb. To us, however, the truth seems to be that modern, the highways are crowded, if at all, only for a few hours a day.

• • •

The additional traffic that our highways could carry would be of tremendous income to a few cities, where really crowded traffic prevails during part of the day, certain lines of commodities have been required to be handled during the night hours. That is "staggering" automobile drivers. The least observing automobile rider must be aware that highway traffic has its "rush hours" much the same as the Narrow Gauge," the Boston Elevated and other tractions.

If the New York traction merger plans are carried into execution it would not require a vivid imagination to picture them as rising into the "Blue Chip" class of securities, assuming that they secure higher fare rates for transport, for such as obtains in Boston, State at, opinion is that they would enjoy few rivals in the field of prosperity The long rides now afforded to New Yorkers for the nickel fare are figurative traffic because they take people to points where large numbers want to do, and are not for the accommodation of a comparative few.

How well the automotive industry is restoring employment is indicated by a compilation made today. This shows that 22,000 men have returned to work in Detroit automobile plants. Seven New England plants have added 1337 employes the past 10 days. Hupp Motor Car has re-employed 500. One hundred men were rehired to work in New York Central shops at Easthuffalo and Depew, 2800 in Norfolk & Western shops at Roanoke, 600 at Illinois Central shops at Paducah, Ky., 1200 of Missouri Pacific at Sedalia, 800 of Missouri-Kansas-Texas, 800 of Southern Pacific at El Paso, and 200 of St. Louis Southwestern at Pine Bluff, Ark.

Parkers' consent decree decision at Washington has not given the packers to engage directly in retail trade. No great amount of press attention was paid to the unanimity of Boston "small" interests protesting against modification of the decree in this respect. The outcome, however, gives them what they wanted at least for the present.

Swinging hopefully into the January atmosphere of a new year, machinery and machine-tool trade throughout the country find an encouraging line of inquiry the one feature, in an otherwise quiet week of business. American Machinist reports Cincinnati machine tools in New England as expected to add to order totals. Inquiries there are plentiful, and there is more than usual number of orders pinned beneath hold-up tags. The optimistic feeling in that section ought to sharply influence that in Los Angeles, where guidness rules.

Airplane Consuming of Gasoline Large

Washington, Jan 6—Airplanes engaged in scheduled and miscellaneous flying operations consumed 12,887,522 gallons of gasoline and 597,212 gallons of oil during 68,836,228 miles of flying during the first half of the past year, according to an estimate by the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce

Chemical shares were under pressure notwithstanding statements that the price war had been terminated in several important products.

Goodyear Reacts on Tire Reports

Goodyear was again under pressure and soon dropped off over 3 points to 40 on reports of further contemplated reductions in tire prices. Goodrich at the same time sold off about a point Assurance of a high Goodyear official to the effect that dividend would be maintained through 1931 was without immediate influence.

American Tobacco Increase Expected

Johns-Manville Bought on Scale

Johns-Manville has been bought on scale down by interests A New York and Boston member house says today:

"Johns-Manville is responding to a feeling that residential building is increasing. This stock has been the outstanding decrease of almost 700 points from 242¾ in 1929 to 48¾ in 1930 and at the closing price of 49 is only up 15 from the low of last year."

Baltimore & Ohio in Good Position

The four trunk line merger agreement has been one of the outstanding influences in the past week, it is admitted in all market quarters In that connection, attention is being attracted to Baltimore & Ohio. The road, according to interpretations of the proposed new alignment, should be one of the principal beneficiaries through acquisition of the Reading and the Central Railroad of New Jersey. Such a system will make possible a new short cut to Chicago, reducing the distance by approximately 100 miles, and the grading by between 700 and 800 feet. Baltimore's management has been alert in meeting new competitive conditions, which has been attracting buying into the stock for the account of important rail interests.

Auto Accessory Companies' Prospects

Several automobile accessory companies have been receiving increased orders recently. That is due directly to efforts of certain motor interests to put out a product that will attract the public. Such a spurt is not unusual. Continued improvement would benefit the accessory makers materially.

Steel Dividend Twice Earned

Barring slight changes due to year-end adjustments, National Steel will show $2 a share or $12 for the earned twice in 1930. More significant is the fact that the company earned it proportion of the total in each quarter of the year, even in the third and fourth periods, which were decidedly poor for the steel industry as a whole.

National Steel made that showing in earnings, while carrying the third largest ore reserve in the industry and with one-third of its capacity non-productive. Its Great Lakes plant at Detroit just now approaching completion.

Corn Products Plans Expansion

Corn Products is reported to be planning to take advantage of the recent decision removing restrictions from the refined corn sugar it prepared foods. In that connection, it plans to double the output of this product in the near future. The company is manufacturing 4,000 pounds of refined corn sugar daily. Capacity of the Kansas City plant is to be doubled and another plant is planned for each of the company's businesses in the future when all the facilities for increased production are available.

Commodity Market Pressure Lowered

Pressure on commodities markets has in large measure ceased and this helps confidence On the other hand, there are still evidences of readjustments in prices of finished goods and products which have been under pressure, including such, for example, as the cuts made by heavy chemicals and the expectation of reductions in tire prices by leading producers.

Motor Issues Are Led by Auburn

The new York show has stimulated more interest in automobiles and the variety of models and improvements and the prices at which they are offered are helpful to trade it is a year of outstanding motor car values Production in 1930

CURB MARKET TURNS DULL AFTER RISE

New York, Jan 6 (AP) The curb market fell into a trading rut today and transactions of a routine character made little impression on the price level reached in the post-Christmas rally The ticker was idle for considerable intervals.

The halt in the forward movement encouraged some profit-taking but offering were well absorbed and the list as a whole showed marked stability. Early morning losses in a few active shares were quickly recovered but trading grew duller as the day advanced Profit-taking pressed on Goldman-Sachs, but it showed good recuperative powers and rebounded Pennroad and Phenandoah did little.

Fleischhaker Sees Recovery as Certain

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

New York, Jan. 6—New York, sensitive to the short term swings of the stock market, has been quieter than the rest of the country From the restful Pacific Coast comes a message of reassured confidence from Herbert Fleischhaker, president of the Anglo & London Paris National Bank in San Francisco, and a prime money and business affairs in his region.

Mr. Fleischhaker emphasized that the combined intelligence of the world is now focussed on the process of economic recovery. He said:

"Long term recovery is, in my opinion, certain, although the exact date is not. My confidence in this is based upon the fundamentals of human nature and economics. It is true that much of our machinery is not progressively satisfying our wants is out of adjustment. Some of it must be repaired, some abandoned, and as history teaches us, some entirely new units may have to be added. The accumulated intelligence of the world is at the job now and has been at it for some time.

"The strained and faulty parts of the world's economic machinery must be straightened out. International monetary systems, lack of balance in production and distribution, governmental activities far afield from the function of government, are problems which have arisen in varied forms throughout the history of civilization—but never before in history has there been so equipped with accumulated knowledge and wealth to solve them."

Asked how he can know when the turn in business will come, Mr. Fleischhaker indicated:

"I should say, first, the statistics of business, underlying contracts, unfilled steel tonnage, etc.; second, statistics of accomplishment, such as employment, production, car loadings, retail sales, bank debits, etc.—all to be anticipated by growing stability in commodity and securities markets, based on a sound conception of values."

The Western banker was next asked what the government can do further, he replied:

"The part of governmental action is clear, first, by repeal, amendment and initiatory action to remove the restrictions to the industrial efficiency that now exist to handicap us in national competition and lowered costs; second, to avoid the extravagances that lead to a national competitive handicap of high taxes."

As to consumers, Mr. Fleischhaker added:

"The ultimate consumer's wants, based on bare necessities, are, in a modern sense, few, compared to his normal total. Give him a job and confidence in its continuance and he will not hesitate to buy. But the initial consumer of raw materials can be lowered to only when he has confidence in the stability of prices and a profit to himself in their utilization. The first spur to his action lies in financial and industrial leadership whose function it now is to provide a safe basis for his operations. The safe financial basis, however, is now here, so accomplished fact, and the underconsumption, favorable prices and the increasing confidence that they have bottomed, together with the natural resistance to any further reduction in standard of living, appear to me to be paving the way for the successful enlargement of operations."

Record Advertising Campaign Planned

New York, Jan. 6—Success of American Tobacco Co. with cigarettes is ascribed, in large part to newspaper advertising in an announcement by President Hill that the company will inaugurate with the new year the largest campaign in its history.

"The great growth in sale of 'Lucky Strike'—unprecedented in the tobacco industry—has been made possible by the power of newspaper advertising," the statement said. "We are going again in 1931 increasing our newspaper advertising expenditures because we believe that this year, like 1930, will be a year of bigger business with us."

STOCKS HIGHER IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

Utility and rail shares led an afternoon buying movement that followed an earlier decline, but most of the pivotal industries were up at least a point.

NEW HAVEN RISES.

New Haven rose 4, American Telephone, Baltimore & Ohio, Eastman Kodak, Allied Chemical, Atchison, Southern Railway, Wabash & Illinois Central approximately 3, and Case, American Water Works and American Telephone "B" 2 to 2¼.

U. S. Steel was up a point.

Resumption of realizing and short selling at the opening provided a downward trend through much of the forenoon, but excessive dullness developed when the leaders had sold off a point or two.

Bears became somewhat nervous and covered, with the result that the market turned in its tracks, regained its recessions and began a rise in advance.

Volume remained small on the rally, although the buying embraced a rather broad list of issues, with the tobacco, utility and food shares prominent.

GOODYEAR TURNS WEAK.

Goodyear was one stock dropping 3 points. Reports that the dividend rate would be reduced when the directors meet tomorrow, as well as forecasts of general cuts in tire prices, the first of which was announced today by Goodyear of Canada, stimulated selling in the issue. Other rubber shares eased slightly.

Commission houses believed the market had further ground to cover on the advance before an improvement reaction was encountered, although it was rather generally agreed that the rise might well be based solely on technical considerations.

There is still some concern over the action of the commodities, especially silver bullion, which made new low today in both New York and London.

Reports that automobile plants are to a lesser extent the railroads are reemploying labor made encouraging reading, and added support to the opinion held by many observers that the unemployment curve was above its lowest point.

Wall Street expects that steel operations figures, appearing tomorrow, to show an increase. Demand from the railroads and from the automotive trade has been picking up, and the development of a seasonal trend is anticipated by many.

Early estimates of the increase in the United States Steel Corporation backlog, to be published on Saturday, run as high as 400,000 tons. A sizeable gain is expected in view of the curtailed activity last month.

BOND RISE CHEERS

Although the increasing strength of bonds may not prove to be the first stages of the long-awaited bull market, those authorities, the gains of the last ten days are regarded most favorably, since they seem to indicate that the spacious conditions which forced bonds down early in December are no longer present.

A strong bond market, it is argued, would be a truly bullish development.

Ontario Natural Gas Development

Washington, Jan. 6—Acquisition of an extensive acreage in Ontario, including several producing wells, has been announced by a Canadian gas and oil company of Hamilton, according to a report from Vice Consul Adam Beaumont, Hamilton, made public by the Department of Commerce. Further drilling will be instituted, and the output of the wells is to be reserved for consumption in Hamilton.

Grains Are Firm in Chicago Market

Chicago, Jan. 6—Grains closed steady from today's close. Wheat was unchanged to 1⅛c higher; corn, 1⅛ to 2⅛c up, and oats, ⅛ to 1⅛c higher. Rye finished 1⅞ to 1¾c up.

Merger Followed by Cut for Sugar

Montreal, Jan. 6—Following consummation of merger of Dominion Sugar Co. and Canada Sugar Refining Co. to form Canada & Dominion Sugar Co., Ltd., the new company announced a reduction of 10 cents a hundredweight in wholesale price of sugars of all grades.

Associated 'Phone Increase 10 P. C.

Chicago — Associated Telephone Co. Ltd., operating unit of Associated Telephone Utilities System, added 8,800 telephones in California, increasing the number to 88,900, an increase of 10 per cent over a year ago.

Slab Zinc Stocks on Hand Smaller

GAIN IN AUTO OUTPUT FOR '31 IS SEEN

New York, Jan. 6—Production of automobiles and trucks in the United States and Canada during 1931 will reach approximately 4,075,000, according to an estimate made today by Automotive Industries, weekly engineering and industrial publication, Philadelphia.

C. A. Musselman, president of the Chilton Class Journal Co., publishers of the magazine, in an address before the National Automobile Dealers' Association, estimated that the total production for 1930 will reach 3,681,000. This, when final figures have been reported, will probably consist of 2,917,000 passenger cars and 564,000 trucks.

"Last year was one of the worst the automobile industry has known," he said.

The two outstanding reasons for this condition were general business depression and the inheritance of a saturated market, due to overproduction during 1929, he stated.

"The total production of cars and trucks made in the United States and Canada in 1929 was 5,622,000. The 1930 figure will represent a decline of approximately 40 per cent, as compared with the previous year's total.

"Passenger car sales during 1929 were about 4,016,000, of which about 1,566,000 were Fords. It is estimated that passenger car sales for 1930 will reach about 2,700,000, of which 1,099,-700 will be Fords. Ford sales makes other than Fords, during 1930, will be 1,600,000, a shrinkage in this group of about 1,000,-000 cars as compared with 1929.

"The American market is not, therefore, very well supplied with new automobiles.

"The market for passenger cars to replace those scrapped should show a continuous growth in 1931, and 1932 will be a still better year."

Warner Is Paying Off Bank Loans

New York, Jan. 6—Net profit of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., in quarter ended Nov. 30 was approximately $2,000,000, or roughly 55 cents a share on the 3,838,969 shares of common outstanding after preferred dividends. While it is too early to estimate profits in the second quarter of the fiscal year, it is probable earnings for the current period will be about the same as in the first quarter. Warner's financial program calls for payment of all bank loans by the end of January and cash on hand is now in excess of $5,000,000.

Grains Are Firm in Chicago Market

Chicago Jan. 6—Torrential downpours delaying the Argentine harvest and injuring wheat quality gave firmness to grains today. Australian harvest advices and winter crop conditions in Missouri and Kansas were also unfavorable. Opening unchanged to ¼ cent up, wheat later hardened somewhat. Corn started at ⅛-¼ cents decline, but afterward scored gains.

Bond Market Holds to a Steady Tone

New York, Jan. 6—Bidding for corporate domestic issues lacked the heartiness that has characterized recent sessions and quotations generally on the bond market a steady tone today. Unusual activity in the Brazilian group stood out in the foreign section, which maintained an upward trend.

Fire Losses of '31 Are to Be Reduced

New York, Jan. 5—Through increased use of tested, flameproof material in building construction, the nation's fire loss will be reduced from 8 to 10 per cent in 1931, it is predicted by Henry Klein, head of the Henry Klein Research Laboratories, here.

Rubber Barely Steady

New York, Jan. 6—Rubber futures today were barely steady: January, 8.30; March, 8.30; May, 8.50. Raw rubber, Singapore, unquoted: March, 8.80; May, 8.78.

PORT OF BOSTON

By JAMES J. DELANEY

With a cargo in her holds worth $2,000,000, the S. S. Mahronda, Brocklebank Line, arrived here almost on schedule after battling her way through heavy seas which swept over her smashing ventilators and damaging deck fittings.

Coming from Calcutta, Colombo, Port Sudan and Port Said, she struck a series of gales as she neared the Grand Banks.

Her cargo, the largest from India and Ceylon in many months, consisted of 11,000 bales of jute, 350 tons of pig iron, and large quantities of rice and tea, it was stated.

She is docked at Cunard Pier, East Boston, where she will discharge her Boston imports. The remainder of her shipment will be taken to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Norfolk.

BOUND AWAY

The S. S. Nova Scotia, Furness Line, will leave here tomorrow for her return trip to St. John's, Newfoundland, and Liverpool, England. She came in yesterday with passengers, docking at the end of piers 40 and 41. Hoosac Tunnel Docks.

William Cunard Scotia, Canadian manufacturer, John C. McKeen, Hugh Silver and James Wenman, officials of the Empire Rubber Co., of Nova Scotia, were passengers. W. H. Saul of the Furness Line made the trip from Liverpool.

MARINE HOME

Unemployed seafaring men are being provided with a home on the Fall River waterfront, it was said by the Eastern Steamship Lines when they stopped passenger service between Boston and Portland. It became known here today. Renamed "Broadway," she has been purchased by the Seamen's Bethel and is now moored at a pier in Staten Island. Elderly, homeless mariners out of work are being provided with sleeping quarters and food as the host.

BOW STOVE IN

Damage to her bow below the waterline will tie up the S. S. City of Montgomery, which left Savannah January 2 for New York and Boston. She was due here Wednesday. She collided with the Raritan, U. S. government dredge, off Cross Shoals. The dredge sank after the crew had been rescued. The steamer went safely to her pier.

In honor of the recent appointment of Judge Felix Forte to the bench of the Somerville court, more than 600 guests will assemble at the Copley-Plaza this evening at a testimonial banquet. Guests will include prominent personages in national, state and city affairs.

Judge Forte has been on the faculty at the Boston University Law School 10 years, has been the author of several important treatises on legal procedure, and holds many honorary offices.

Judge Forte is one of the youngest members to be appointed to the office. He is a native of Boston, a graduate of Boston University and Harvard, and was in his early days on the staff of several Boston newspapers.

Following the banquet, there will be a program of speakers, music and entertainment and dancing. Joseph G. Tomasello, Boston contractor, heads the committee in charge, assisted by Paul Cifrino, Thomas Nutile and Sebastian Smedile.

WEST POINT NEEDS MORE FACILITIES

Congress Should Pass at Once Bill Adding 15,000 Acres to Reservation

As chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, Representative James of Michigan has introduced a bill providing for the purchase at a cost of $1,500,000 of 15,000 acres adjacent to the reservation of the West Point Military Academy.

Hearings on this bill will be held soon after Congress returns from its Christmas recess. There will be ample time before adjournment to enact this legislation if Congress will face the facts and follow where they lead.

Here are the four reasons given by the present superintendent, Major-General W. R. Smith, why the acquisition of this additional land is the outstanding need of the military academy today:

FIRST—In order to secure an adequate and pure water supply. West Point is now dependent upon a water supply that is privately owned, grossly inadequate and in danger of contamination unless immediate steps are taken to safeguard it.

SECOND—To establish a landing field for airplanes. The academy is without any landing field at present and it is necessary to send the cadets all the way to Langley field, Virginia, during the summer in order to give them even the limited instruction in aviation that they now receive.

THIRD—To construct small arms and field artillery ranges absolutely essential for the instruction of cadets in artillery, machine gun and rifle firing. Under existing conditions it is now necessary to send the cadets to distant posts during the summer for field artillery target practice.

GEORGE WASHINGTON
NECESSARY ARTILLERY RANGES
ADEQUATE CAMP SITES
REQUIRED MANEUVER GROUNDS
WEST POINT'S CRAMPED QUARTERS
NEEDED AVIATION FIELDS
Nelson Harding

FOURTH—To provide camp sites and maneuver grounds, which will be under the control of the superintendent, and available at all times for the training in the field that is an essential part of the instruction West Point must give if its high standards are to be maintained.

Not only General Smith but every other general officer of the army, from General Pershing down to the youngest brigadier, is prepared to appear before the military committees of both Houses of Congress and appeal for the passage of the West Point emergency bill at the short session.

Urging the immediate passage of the James bill, General Pershing says: "If West Point is to continue to fill its mission of preparing its graduates for emergencies, greater facilities for the special training required must be provided."

In behalf of the same measure, Major-General Fechet, chief of the army air corps, will tell the Congress that "it is of paramount importance that the United States Military Academy be provided with an airplane landing field."

Surely these practical reasons for the immediate expansion of the West Point reservation will appeal to the common sense of every senator and representative in Congress.

But there is an additional reason that should also appeal to the patriotic sentiment of every senator and representative in Congress.

West Point was the first strong military post established by George Washington. At West Point was established the best garrison which the United States had in its early history. There a school of instruction for our army engineers existed almost from the time West Point became a military post. Military instruction has been given at West Point, in one form or another, ever since.

Year after year Washington urged upon Congress the formation of a "National Military Academy." It was a major recommendation of his last message to Congress. It was the subject of what was probably the last letter he ever wrote.

Two days before his death in 1799, writing to Alexander Hamilton, George Washington said:

"THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A MILITARY ACADEMY UPON A RESPECTABLE AND EXTENSIVE BASIS HAS EVER BEEN CONSIDERED BY ME AS AN OBJECT OF PRIMARY IMPORTANCE TO THE COUNTRY, AND WHILE I WAS IN THE CHAIR OF GOVERNMENT I OMITTED NO PROPER OPPORTUNITY OF RECOMMENDING IT TO THE ATTENTION OF THE LEGISLATURE."

Next year the government and people of the United States will commemorate the two-hundredth anniversary of Washington's birth.

Nothing that the government has yet done in preparation for this great event is as appropriate as would be the enactment of the James bill to enable the United States Military Academy at West Point to perform the high mission that George Washington gave it.

Curley's Fine Message

City Making Notable Progress Under His Administration

Mayor Curley's annual address to the Boston City Council, in which he reviewed the record of his administration the past year and set forth his program for the future, was a forceful document, marked by literary charm but, more important, by a distinguished, progressive social philosophy.

We rarely contemplate or appreciate the progress we have made as a community until the history of achievement is assembled and placed before us in concrete, understandable form.

Our especial duty the past year has been, in so far as a city government could do it, to overcome the business cessation and to mitigate the hardships attendant upon unemployment.

Mayor Curley's review forces upon our attention the fact of which we had been quite aware in a sort of casual way that his administration has accomplished more to abate the misfortunes of the time than perhaps any other city government in the United States.

With a fine sense of business fitness, he devoted his program to the construction of public works of ex enduring character.

His program provided employment in substitution of the dole and "charity" relief. People were enabled by it to earn their livelihood in dignity and independence, without the demeaning influence of pauperism and beggary.

And it is a notable fact, very much to his credit, that the public works conceived were quite largely for the development of the social-welfare institutions which administer to the health of the people, which is a city's first duty to maintain, and for the development of the traffic facilities without which the city of Boston could not accommodate its future material greatness and growth.

The City Hospital, for example, has been developed into the finest municipal health institution in this country, and the $10,000,000 expansion program should proceed with the celerity that Mayor Curley desires in order that the additional facilities for the care of children may be provided without delay.

Mayor Curley points out that the infant mortality and the tuberculosis death rates are today the lowest in all the history of the city and that the diphtheria death rate has been reduced to infinitesimality. It is easy enough for us to read these statements and to take just pride in them and it is also quite easy for us to be unmindful that they are not attained by accident; that they require technical planning and advancement under the health authorities co-operating under the Mayor. But, in view of this splendid record, we can resolve any doubt we may have and grant the Mayor's request for further expansion unGrudgingly.

With the development of the East Boston airport by his forward-looking administration and with the consummation of plans for the use of Governor's Island and reclamation of the Bird Island flats, the city of Boston will possess the greatest airport in the world.

His desire to establish the $1,000,000 boulevard and develop the marine park in East Boston ought to be approved without stint because of its evident advantages to traffic and to the recreational life of the people of that section of the city.

The $40,000,000 rapid-transit program, the $5,000,000 ex-

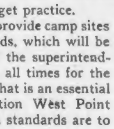
By ELSIE ROBINSON

'Are You Monkey Minded?

"I'D LIKE to do something," you say. "Something new and different. Something worth while. And I'm always trying—BUT SOMEHOW I SEEM TO LOSE INTEREST. If I could only find something that really interested me—



Elsie Robinson

That's what you're saying. Your feelings are mixed as you say it. You feel a little proud because you are so restless. You're sure it makes you different from other people—stodgy, humdrum people, who never have such perplexities. And yet at the same time you're irritated and sorry for yourself. You envy people who have found some work they're crazy about. Lucky dogs! They have all the breaks. If only YOU could have Your Chance! If only you could find something that would hold your interest!

Stop wishing! You'll never find it. Though you live to be a hundred you'll never find an interest that will hold you—

IF YOU WANT SUCCESS, YOU'LL HAVE TO LEARN TO HOLD AN INTEREST.

An INTEREST isn't the important thing in life. YOUR ATTITUDE TOWARD INTERESTS is the most important thing.

Thousands of interests offer opportunity. Any one of those thousands may lead you to success. That will depend not on the interest, but on WHAT YOU DO WITH THE INTEREST AFTER YOU GET IT.

No interest, however alluring, is of any value to you until you've made it your own—until you've done things to it and with it. And that can't be accomplished in a brief gush of excitement. It takes time. Tiresome time. And that's where you'll prove whether you're MAN MINDED OR MONKEY MINDED.

Monkeys like new interests as much as men. Monkeys can think and desire and plan—they are curious and eager and enthusiastic. Getting interested is the best thing a monkey does. And he's always willing to take a chance. BUT YOU NEVER SAW A MONKEY GET ANYWHERE WITH HIS INTERESTS. And that's because no monkey can ever hang on to an interest long enough to make it worth while. There's no GRIP in a monkey's mind. That's why he's still a monkey.

Man had a mind like that once, before he was fully a man. Children and savages still have minds like that. Everything excites them, but they "lose interest." That isn't because the interest isn't worth while, but because their minds haven't yet learned to hang on.

Civilization is a process of learning to hang on to interests—to resist the temptation of new interests —to develop the interest you have chosen. The more civilized you are the more GROWN UP you are—the better able you are to hang on—If you continually "lose interest" it isn't the interest's fault. It's YOUR fault. IT'S A SIGN THAT YOU'RE STILL MONKEY MINDED!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Hard Year on Freelances

NEW YORK, Jan. 6—This has been the leanest year in the memory of any living free lance writer. But the saturation point is reached. The worst is over. The boys and girls who crash the pulp paper magazines have dusted off their typewriters to bang out feverish yarns again.

During the hiatus, editors of romance, mystery and detective tales used up stories that had been purchased but deferred for one reason or another. Thus the fashioners of "pot boilers" could only dip into their reserve supply of cash—if any—and mark time.

Two "sensational" scriveners who averaged around $200 a week in affluent days did not sell a line for more than 10 months. Many turned to other jobs temporarily and still others abandoned fiction completely.

Aside from the tingle of creating imaginary thrills, there is the romance in living by gambler's luck. The free lance does not write by order as do his more fortunate fellows. He writes and takes his chance. If his effort does not hit one bull's eye it may another.

The free lance has no assurance of regular income and is improvident, but no class is so happy-go-lucky. They get up when they please, retire in the same manner and work as the spirit moves. And every new day may mark the coming of something unexpected, something new like the allegro of a sonata.

Nearly all, with the sale of the first yarn, gravitate to the easy bonhomie of such spots as The Village, where in attics of the faded old rooming houses they find "atmosphere." About them are the table d'hotes, waffle parlors, coffee shops and other professionals.

With a sudden windfall they make first payment on some antiquated farm house in the wilds of Jersey or Connecticut and out of these rural migrations many "artistic villages" have been spawned. Later they may sneak over to Southern France and be "discovered."

J. P. McAvoy has as his valet, literary mascot and court clown a diminutive Harlem colored lad known as "Blue Boy." The author has carried him to Europe, Palm Beach and Hollywood. He appears before guests in a bright red Morrocan costume and can serve coffee while executing a Charleston, all of which is grand fun.

* * *

Laws governing lease breaking in New York strongly favor the tenant. Seldom, if the rent is paid, can one be dispossessed. Apartment owners fear damage suits—the slimy kind upon which blackmail lawyers thrive. To allege, for instance, a woman tenant is disreputable is difficult to prove without actual flashlight evidence.

* * *

Perhaps the briefest and most hilarious dramatic review on record was penned by the late James Metcalfe. It was one of the early editions of The Follies which was not so hot save for the appearance of Bert Williams. Metcalfe's capsule review read:

"Black Star & Frost."

Drama in real life: They were once associated in business, quarreled and went separate ways, not speaking for 15 years. One became the head of a large advertising agency; the other lost it all in Wall Street and became an advertising solicitor. Recently the solicitor was sent to solicit from the agency head. He was immediately admitted, stepped in the door, clicked his heels, saluted and cried:

"What a hell of a kick this must give you!"

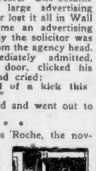
Arthur Somers Roche, the novelist, has elevator phobia. He has never been in an editor's office or lived above the first hotel floor. Alexander Woolcott, meeting him the other day, inquired:



"Hello, what hotel basement are you hiding in now?"

"Goodbye," she farewelled. "I certainly hate to see you go away out there among all those chairs and tables."

Theodore Roosevelt

Warning Words Recalled on Anniversary of His Death

Theodore Roosevelt, 26th President of the United States, died 12 years ago today.

Already, in the history of his country and in the hearts of his countrymen, Roosevelt ranks with the truly great Americans of all times.

For the right of the people to rule, he delighted to "fight the good fight with all his might."

In the eternal struggle between privileges and justice, between the rights of the many and the special interest of the few, Roosevelt fought for justice and against privilege in every form. With those who whined about "the tyranny of the majority" he had scant patience.

"The only tyrannies from which men, women and children are suffering in real life," he said, "are the tyrannies of minorities."

If any American doubts the stand Roosevelt would take in the fight of Senator Norris of Nebraska and Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, and other Progressives, to prevent the power commission from subjecting the American people to the tyrannical minority, these warning words of the 26th President of the United States should suffice:

"Every special interest is entitled to justice, but not one is entitled to a vote in Congress, to a voice on the bench, or to representation in any public office. The Constitution guarantees protection to property, and we must make that protection good. But it does not give the right of suffrage to any corporation.

"There can be no effective control of corporations while their political activity remains. To put an end to it will be neither a short nor an easy task, but it can be done."

It can only be done, however, under the leadership of torch bearers like Roosevelt who believe in the right of the people to rule and know no party when that right is challenged.

tension of the subway to Audubon Circle, the speedy completion of the $16,000,000 East Boston tunnel and his Stony Brook, Chelsea North Bridge and his $3,000,000 plan of highway widenings all visualize the growth of the metropolitan city and ought to be accepted with the enthusiasm that has already greeted the general street development to relieve the terrific congestion in the heart of the city.

Obviously these undertakings should be financed by bond issues, because they include improvements of a permanent character to be enjoyed by future generations as well as by the present generation. To impose immediate, direct taxes to finance them would destroy the acceleration they are giving to business and would result in turning a new army of unemployed back into the labor market.

Mayor Curley's program is laden with other advisable projects, which the city must absorb as quickly as its facilities will permit.

His program is courageous, forward-looking and is flavored by a passionate desire to relieve the burdens which have fallen so heavily upon our people least able to carry them.
